BEAUTY TO REMAIN UNTOUCHED

No Change In General Nature of Estate

Preservation of the natural beauty of the famous Gillette estate is the key-note of the general plans just completed by a well known landscape architect for the recently opened development which has for many years been the haunt of winter and summer visitors to Tryon.

Although Gillette Woods will be supplied with all modern conveniences taken direct to each property line there will be no change in the general nature of the estate. Engineers are working out the roads thru-out the great pine forest with a view of preserving the famous beauty of the hills and valleys. But few additional roads are necessary to reach all parts of the development and these few will be laid out so as to conform with the roads that have for many years attracted visitors along their winding ways.

The present plans include a nine hole golf course which can be situated in such a manner as to cause no destruction of timber land. Natural hazards will lend a sportiness to the small course equal to that of many large courses of the country.

Many of the annual winter visitors have evinced pleasurable surprise that property in the famous beauty spot of Tryon is now available to the public and inquiries are being received daily by Mr. Ellsworth, sales manager, regarding the property. A recent visitor, Mr. Goodwin of Hartford, Conn., who knew the former owner of the estate, Mr. Gillette personally, has indicated his desire to return to Tryon in the autumn to build a home among the pines. Contracts will be let within the next few days for several new homes in various parts of the development and a number of sales have been recorded in the past few days.

This development offers an unusually attractive proposition for the investor and the home seeker.

DRAMA CLUB PRESENTS "ENTER MADAM"

Unusually Large Audience Enjoys Great Masterpiece

The Drama Fortnightly faced its usual night of rain Wednesday, April 7, but notwithstanding this, the house was crowded to the doors with an audience eager to listen to the piquant comedy "Enter Madame" by Gilda Varesi and Dolly Bryne, and produced for our humble but happy purposes by H. W. Crandall, and directed by Miss Olive Pratt.

The play deals with—no, laughs over the brilliant divorce proclivities of the present day. Madame Lisa Della Robbia, of peerless voice and consuming but irresistible ego, flashes from continent to continent with her entourage, while her husband and son are left to go their lonely ways. Against this condition, the husband eventually revolts, and with the aid of a lady at once predatory and domestic, proposes to divorce his bride-of-passed wife and to settle down with the domestic lady. The scene is set. All seems to be going well with middle aged and dully

At once all is hubbub, fascination, turmoil, anger, elation, romance and intrigue. Madame with weapons as old as Delila's or Many Garden's—recovers more than willing husband, the domestic but intriguing lady is left to nurse her chagrin, and the enslaved followers of the prima are in a heaven of vicarious happiness. The proper son, engaged to an equally proper young lady, alone is scandalized, and would gladly enter into combat with his father in defense of his mother's honor.

The leading parts were taken by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Law, both of touch as light as air upon the comedy of the tale. Mrs. Law was as piquant, as provocative and illusive as the lines designed her to be. MANY GREAT HORSES ENTERED

The band began to play and the horses and ponies began to canter around the old Base Ball grounds out in the valley of the Pacolet River, and the great event to which Tryon has been looking forward for months was under way on Thursday afternoon of this week.

A hundred or more automobiles were filled with ladies with their Easter hats and their newest Spring gowns; men with knickerbockers and golf caps, boys and girls with red cheeks and sparkling eyes, all full of excitement and expectation were on the ground. A grand array of horses with their bright trappings and high spirit, a score or more ponies with their young riders completed a brilliant scene. The rain the day before had laid the dust, freshened up the grounds and checked the forest fires that had been burning for several days.

Entire Populace Turns Out To See Throughbred Perform

Tryon had shut up shop and turned out en masse to make the first Annual Horse Show of Tryon a great success. The air was filled with the breath of the pines and the sweet smell of the woods. The surrounding mountains formed a great and picturesque amphitheatre around the scene. The fluttering flags of the Dogwood and the Judas tree were partly unfurled and the blooms of the Sarvis tree trembled in the air like a swarm of butter flies. The life the beauty and the best of Tryon and all of her visitors were assembled with their minds and hearts awakened to the event and keen with expectation.

Judges from Camden Indianapolis and Detroit at Show

At two-thirty promptly the bugle sounded for the horses and the first event was started. Mr. J. W. Barksdale riding, James Vernon, Jr. on Laurel Queen and George D. Wick, Jr. on Thursday. The Judges were George T. Little of Camden, Charles J. Buchanan of Indianapolis, and F. J. McDonald of Detroit. Mr. McDonald also was in general charge of all horses in the enclosure. The awards second and Laurel Queen third.

Childrens Riding One of the Enjoyable Entries of Show

The second event was the Children's Riding. There were so many entries for this event that it was necessary to divide the same into two parts. The young people on their ponies made a charming scene as they rode around the enclosure. Jarvey on Betsey, Robert Smith on Dan, Miss Esther Adams on Merry Legs, James Vernon, Jr. on Laurel Queen, Elizabeth Gardner on Sunshine and Helen Raoul on Circus. The Judges Laurel Queen first, Merry Legs second, Betsey third and Dan fourth.

The next event was the balance of the show.
