Surplus Water Carried Away by Storm Drains

Sewerage facilities as provided by Tryon, North Carolina, can be best compared to no town of its size in the two States. The rapid expansion of the municipality as soon as the sewerage system is completed is a fact which has been worked out by the city council. Mayor W. S. Green stated that it is prepared to meet all reasonable demands that are made upon it. Eight Miles Installed. Eight miles of first class sewerage have been installed in many parts of the town and work of installing more is going forward as rapidly as the outlying sections are built up. It is one of the paramount requisites that before a permit for building is issued, the property-owner must agree to make all necessary sewer connections. It is on account of sewerage conditions, as considered from one angle, that Tryon has for many years been able to boast of a community comparatively free from contagious diseases. Most of those occurring have their origin elsewhere, being transported to the city by incoming tourists it is said.

Topography Helpful

The natural topography of the town has been of much assistance in the drainage of the city, although it has made the installation of a satisfactory sewerage system rather difficult, it is said.

The town is built on the tops of hills and in the coxey hollows lying within the famous Thermal belt of the Blue Ridge. The result is that all surplus water rapidly collects in the low places and is carried away rapidly by adequate storm sewerage. Each freshet washes away such surface filth as may have accumulated.

In the matter of underground sewerage the topography of the little city has made the work difficult, because it was found impracticable to dispose of all refuse from one vent. Several have been necessitated and his has resulted in additional expense, city officials state.

Teaching a Salesman

Just what should a salesman be taught? "One of my assistants has a pet expression," writes Herbert M. Maxwell in System, the Magazine of Business. "We don't want machines out on the road for us. We want human beings that are right up on their toes and tingle all over while they are selling—who enjoy the buyer-and-seller 'conflict.' But we want them to have their feet squarely on the earth, even in the heat of battle, and the finger that trembles over the order pencil, deadly accurate in recording exactly what the buyer wants. Don't show that you are nervous or you'll make the other fellow nervous, too."

Western Carolina As An Educational Sectional

Just why colleges and other educational institutions are located in certain places and not in others is a problem hard to solve. Quite frequently colleges are the outgrowth of smaller schools, which have been established by some local educator. Locations have not been chosen, but have just "happened." But most of the school in western North Carolina have sought this location because of its wonderful climate, and its superior health conditions.

With an elevation of more than 2,500 feet above the sea level, western North Carolina has an invigorating and health-giving atmosphere. The dryness of the air prevents the cold from being felt ever as much as it is in places further south. Then the surrounding mountain ranges break the cold winds of the winter, giving a protection which is most desirable.

Girls and boys who come to this section from the low country soon show the results of the bracing air, by growing stronger and more vigorous. The inspiring views of the mountains obtained on every hand, have a part in making big men and women. No matter how old a man or woman may be he will never forget the mountains when once he has lived among them.

Western North Carolina has a number of splendid schools and colleges, and is destined to become the seat of other institutions of learning. It is a section which is just coming into its own, and it would be hard to predict what the next 10 or 20 years holds in store for this favored section.

Chalking of Paint

It is desirable that a paint fall by chalking, but this failure should not be in evidence within six to twelve months after application. Good paint should protect the surface for two or three years or longer and chalking should be very gradual.
