

Wanoca Presents Thriller Of Year

"The monster" is at large again! Karloff, the grotesque creature of the original "Frankenstein," a murderous giant constructed from parts of dead bodies and brought to life at the height of a crashing electrical storm, comes to the Wanoca theatre in "The Bride of Frankenstein," a sequel to the first picture.

In this strange drama, produced for Universal by Carl Laemmle, Jr., the Monster is seen in further adventures of such a hair-raising nature that the picture is said to furnish the very ultimate in ghastly thrills. At the conclusion of "Frankenstein," it will be remembered, the Monster was apparently destroyed in a burning mill but the opening scenes of "The Bride of Frankenstein" show how he escaped death and returned to throw the entire countryside into a state of terror.

Henry Frankenstein, the half-mad scientist who created the Monster, finds himself forced to continue his experiments with the evil Dr. Pretorius, already successful in the creation of tiny living human beings who lack only size to make them even more perfect figures than the Monster himself.

Meanwhile, the terrifying creature continues his murderous career, until he is befriended by a hermit who teaches him to talk but again lapses into savagery and takes to the hills. From this point the excitement increases, culminating when the mad scientists collaborate on the creation of a mate for the lumbering giant. Then follows what is said to be the most amazing climax in the history of the screen.

DUPLIN BOYS IN TEXTILE SCHOOL

(Continued from Page One) boys an opportunity to attain success in their own home State. The present location of the 132 graduates of the Textile School who are now employed is as follows: North Carolina, 101; Tennessee, 6; Georgia, 6; South Carolina, 5; Virginia, 4; Alabama, 2; New York, 1; New Jersey, 2; Connecticut, 1; Massachusetts, 1; Ohio, 1; South America, 1; and India, 1.

THE OLD SCHOOL HOUSE

The school house once stood by the road.

But the road was not of gravel, It was only made of God's own earth,

Where people always travel. Still on the yard the grass is growing,

The grass so rich and green; The sunshine is forever flowing,

But the house is now unseen. The sunshine helped the flowers

To remind you of blooming youth, It was all so grand and glorious,

A glimpse of heaven—in truth. While in our minds the old green desk and a teacher ever near,

And the old worn chair in which he sat, Are memories forever dear.

The dear voice that wooed us to be wise,

We often did not heed, We remember the voice with regret.

The voice we often need. "It" was so different from the schools that we today call "Hi",

With so many shrieking voices, That seem to reach the sky. Oh, many a hike out to the hills,

They pass like pleasant memories— They seem like many thrills;

If those days were here again, And that voice once more given,

It would be more pleasant next time— For 't would be a glimpse of Heaven.
