district of Virginia, at his vacation retreat in Alamance county—to present the plaintiff's case, and the district attorney made no objection to the plaintiff's seeking relief through Judge Way.

Judge Meekins said his idea was "that the revised status of the United States pointed out a complete remedy involving the collection of taxes by the government and that to enjoin the government from the collection of the tax because of the alleged threat, as the plaintiff termed it, by the Congress to cut off the taxpayers' right to adjudicate his cause in the courts was not sufficient to warrant the unusual and unprecedented remedy suggested by the plaintiff—injunction against the government and a restraining order in favor of the taxpayer."

Judge Meekins was acting for Judge Way during the latter's absence on vacation.

DIST. ESSAY CONTEST STAGED AT CLINTON

Clinton Aug. 1.—Layton Pait, representing Bladenboro High school, won first place here Thursday over four other contestants in the Southern district essay contest of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association.

By virtue of his victory here today, young Pait will go to Raleigh during August to compete in the State finals contest for the State championship and first prize of a one-year scholarship.

Second place in the contest went to John Roland Godwin of Dunn, route 6, who lives in Sampson county. Miss Marguerite Thomas of Broadway took third place; Wade H. Parnell of Lumberton took fourth place, and Miss Annie Moore Watha, in Pender County, fifth place.

Prizes ranging from $10.00 down to $2.50 were awarded to the contestants. They all spoke on "What a Unified Program of Marketing and Cooperative Purchasing Can Mean to the Farmers of North Carolina."

M. G. Mann of Raleigh, General Manager of the Cotton Association, who is in charge of the essay contest work made a brief talk outlining the history of the essay contest which was started eight years ago as an educational project to better acquaint the farmers with the advantages of cooperative marketing and cooperative purchasing. al boys and girls have participated in the essay contest during the past eight years and, Mr. Mann said, "I can say without hesitation that each year the contest has been a little better than it was the year before. This year we have had unprecedented interest shown in the contest and it has been given the enthusiastic support of educational authorities, agricultural leaders and the weekly and daily newspapers of the State."

H. Sivertson of Autryville, a member of the board of directors of the Cotton Association, commended the contestants upon the high quality of their essays. Mr. Sivertson, who first saw the light of day in that highly cooperative country of Norway, pointed out some of the advantages Norwegian farmers have derived from working together and said, "America has just as fine men, women, boys and girls as any other country in the world, and if Norway, Sweden and Denmark can make the success they have of cooperative marketing, I am sure that our own American farmers can do the same."

Judges in the contest were Mrs. Roy Carter of Salemburg, Miss Isabella Cromartie of Garland and J. T. Griffin, vocational teacher of Autryville.

The prizes were awarded by James Butler, Editor of the Sampson County News, who commended the contestants upon the high quality of their essays and also pointed out a number of advantages farmers are receiving by working together.

Presenting cooperation as "the master key to a real, permanent agricultural prosperity," the winner in the contest pointed out that by working together the once impoverished farmers of Denmark became the most prosperous farmers in the world.
