In case of doubt don't borrow and don't lend.

One reason why women can't keep secrets is because they tell them to their husbands.

Hard work, long hours and low pay is not the way to make a country permanently prosperous.

People who fail to mind their own business are rarely equipped to take care of other people's problems.

The lion and the lamb may lie down together some day but Democrats and Republicans are different.

We have changed our minds on many subjects in our life, but up to date, we still maintain that there is no use for spinach.

Mother's Day will be observed by many people who care very little about what happens to the average mother of the nation.

Speeding automobiles are increasing threats to life and limb. Careless auto drivers should be punished, even if they live in our own town.

MOTHER'S DAY FOR ALL MOTHERS

Next Sunday is Mother's Day and millions of American children will express affection for their mothers in some tangible way.

This is a splendid idea and all of us should appreciate the opportunity it offers. Affection and love for one's own mother is the natural order of living and in some individuals has grown into a veneration for motherhood in general and is marked by increasing concern for the physical well-being of all mothers.

Mother's Day will not have achieved its purpose in our lives until we, as a people, reach this last stage. Unhappily, the number of deaths that accompany motherhood in the United States every year indicates a tragic failure on our part to do all that should be done. Encouraging, however, is the sentiment that has demanded that steps be taken to assure proper safeguards for all mothers and to save the lives of many women needlessly sacrificed each year.

The individual reader of this article may think that his, or her influence is small, but nevertheless we urge everyone to take some interest in the problem. Certainly civilization has not reached a very high level when such a condition continues to exist without effective protest from children who have grown into maturity and understand the factors involved.

GUARD AGAINST ENVY

Nothing kills a town or city quicker than a spirit of envy, regardless of how it works. As long as the people of a community are striving to keep ahead of others, with no other goal in view, then that long will the settlement remain a hick village, even if it has people by the thousands.

Fortunately, our town is singularly free from an excess of mean-spirited envy, the low-down spite of narrow-minded souls. Once in a while one runs across a petty exhibition of disgusting selfishness expressing its discontent by striking at a neighbor or at home. Luckily, most of the time, our people are broad-minded, liberal and unselfish.

It will do us no harm, however, as citizens of our town to guard against this insidious poison that saps community good will. Let us be sure that we have the good fortune of our friends, that we strive for the common betterment of our citizenship and that, whatever

WHAT ABOUT COLLEGE?

Schools are closing and a number of young people will soon go into the business of making money. Too many will stop their scholastic training at the end of high school days without realizing the tremendous advantage that will come to them by pursuing their way through college.

This newspaper does not recommend a college course for every boy and girl. There was a time when people thought this was a good idea, but, undoubtedly, there are some boys and girls who will not take advantage of the educational opportunities that can be obtained. These might as well go to work, whether they are the sons or daughters of rich or poor parents.

At the same time, let us urge all students who are completing their high school courses to give serious thought to the possibility of attending college. The right institution, and the right personal application, will make a difference in life.

There are people in our town who would be charming companions and become firm friends if they took time off to get acquainted with each other.

Washington News For U. S. Farmers

FARM INCOME UP RURAL ELECTRIC LINES FLOODS AND SOIL LOSS EROSION LOSSES ENORMOUS

Farm income is expected to exceed that of last year on account of increased marketings, which more than off-set a decline of about 5 percent in farm prices.

For the first three months of the year, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the total income was $1,554,000,000, or $101,000,000 more than for the same period last year.

This gain is recorded in spite of decreased rental and benefit payments which were seriously affected by the invalidation of the AAA.

Farmers in many sections of the United States are beginning to enjoy the advantages of rural electrification which is making remarkable strides.

Of course, progress is slow when compared to the vast number of farm families without electric service, but it is encouraging when compared with the number formerly using electricity.

Administrator Morris L. Cook reports that more than 7,800 miles of lines are now in process of being constructed to serve nearly 29,000 new rural customers. In many cases the projects are undertaken through cooperative county units and farmers in this county who desire electricity should begin making plans to take advantage of the government's program to make electricity available to rural residents.

Destructive floods in the East recently emphasized the vital importance of flood control in the United States.

As a part of the problem involves the control of rain water over large water sheds, it is obvious that the solution is not in the erection of higher levees and dams in the low lands but that some method must be devised to regulate the flow of rain water in the up-lands.

This happens to fit in with the Department of Agriculture's program of soil conservation. The rapid run-off of rain water not only produces flood water in the lower reaches of our rivers but carries away vast quantities of rich farming land with huge loss to American farmers.

Scientific checks on experimental plots have demonstrated unmistakably that the run-off can be slowed down. Heavily timbered areas, with their natural mulch, retain practically all rainfall, but in open fields, under various systems of cropping, more than 60 percent of the rain runs off in headlong fashion. Where the land is steep, with erosive gullies in places, the run-off is practically complete.

Secretary Wallace points out the interest of farmers in conserving soil is to be served by slowing the run-off. If this is done over wide areas, it will be important in flood control, but more vital is the saving of moisture in the land and the prevention of costly erosion. He cites an estimate that 3,000,000,000 tons of American soil now blows or runs in the rain down to the rivers and the sea each year. This is enough to cover 1,800,000 acres an inch deep. While it takes Nature from 400 to 1,000 years to lay down an acre inch of top soil, some of our land today is losing that much in a year from erosion. It is a total loss and, worse, means that the protective covering of the land has been removed and that erosion will become a permanent feature.

Census Reports

Chickens on Onslow farms numbered only 70,999 on January 1, 1935, according to a special report of the 1935 Federal Farm Census, released today by Director William L. Austin of the Bureau of Commerce. A total of 8,806,111 chickens were reported from 265,607 farms, or 84.8 percent of all the farms in the State; 81.8 percent, or 2,236 Onslow farms reported.

While not among the smallest chicken raisers in the State Onslow was far below the leader, Johnson, which reported 229,310 on hand. Sparsely settled Dare had the low report of 3,146.

Of the 16,180,272 chickens on North Carolina farms during 1934, Onslow reported 104,914. During the calendar year 1934 the production of chicken eggs in the State totaled 35,600,854 dozens. Onslow reported 222,541.

Nerves

Do they torture you by day?
Keep you awake at night?

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES.
What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES.
Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves

Do they make you Cranky,
Blue—give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache?

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still. Nerve Strain brings on Headache.
Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion. There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves

Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who loves you if you work when your NERVES are not normal.
You can't have a good time when you are nervous. You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.

Quiet your nerves with
