

Restocking River With Black Bass

Importance Sheltered Streams Stressed by Chalk, Game Commissioner

A large shipment of Lake Mattamuskeet Black Bass were secured from the Fayetteville hatchery recently and afforded new homes in the waters of New River and tributaries. The fingerlings were secured from Charles W. Bonham by J. R. Gurganus of Jacksonville.

In commenting on the program to restock North Carolina Streams with fish life, J. D. Chalk, Game and Inland Fisheries Commissioner, gave as his firm conviction that efforts should not be made to better angling conditions for the next open season. It is the Commissioner's opinion that better fishing for years to come should be the keynote of anyone adopted by the State, the sportmen and land owners.

"With this thought in mind," the Commissioner stated, "we must consider a factor vital to the heart of our better fishing program—shelter in the form of vegetation and cover on our streams and on the watersheds they drain. Constantly the strain upon our fishing waters is being increased as thousands of North Carolinians are turning to this ideal sport. It is therefore necessary for fishermen to realize that the ease with which an open stream may be fished must be sacrificed for the more difficult fishing found in streams having adequate brush and shelter.

"The importance of shelter in our streams has been stressed before," Mr. Chalk asserted. "Counter to this slight inconvenience to the angler is a vast benefit offered fish life. In the shelter afforded, fish may find food and a refuge from predators until they have attained a size sufficient to venture into more open water.

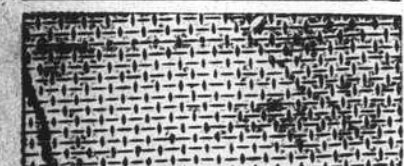

"We owe to future generations of anglers and to ourselves the responsibility of assisting in every way possible the comeback of our streams that only nature can assure," the Commissioner declared.

be found at the present time in or around Wallace, Rose Hill or Teachey. Come to think about it, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Carr have already been there a week. We know them as Raymond and Ruth, and we'll make a guess that Ruth is going to spend the summer with her mother in Edenton, while Raymond will come back to New York, but will make a second trip down there in the fall. They were lucky to be out of the city on the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Moody Turner, or Betty and Moody if you like, are leaving on the Fourth of July aboard the S. S. George Washington for Norfolk and thence to Teachey by train. We hope for them smooth sailings and happy landings. Going also this week-end is Harry Turner, or just plain "Icke". He can be found plentifully around Wallace or Teachey during the next two weeks but we advise you not to get him started on the New York Yankees. And Hallie, "Micky", Turner is reported to have been going South, but don't look for him
