WALLACE HOST TO 500 PEOPLE FISH SUPPER

(Continued from Page One) seat and lined the warehouse floor, of the coordination of the local town government, and its cooperation with civic and business organizations interested in the development of the town, which Gresham pointed out, is centered in the midst of the greatest farming and trucking belt in North Carolina and should logically become one of the largest tobacco markets in the state.

In a brief review Gresham traced Wallace's development, disclosing that it had come from a plantation to the guiding spirit in this section. Among the "firsts" credited to this town, other than the greatness of the strawberry mart, he said, is the first bank, the first warehouse, and the only Merchant's Association in the county, the organization taking an active part in fostering local development which is planned to culminate within the year with the operation of nine new stores, and possibly another warehouse and an hotel.

Soon to be occupied is a two-story building here and indications are that several additional buildings will be constructed immediately. While definite announcements have not been made as to when construction will begin, it is understood that the majority of the building activities will be well underway prior to January 1.

Gresham congratulated the assemblage upon the closer association of Penderlea home-headers and the Town of Wallace, and with his final remarks he urged that the public never forget to perpetuate historic old Rockfish cemetery, a landmark for Duplin county in which persons, regardless of religious affiliations, have been interred since history began in this section.

DRY LEADERS HOLD TEMPERANCE RALLY

(Continued from Page One) sumption in the United States. Planning an organized fight against intoxicating liquors, Miss Cox stated that she would aid every precinct in Duplin in holding similar meetings.

In his talk Quinn disclosed that Duplin is asked to contribute $100 each year toward temperance work. An offering for this purpose was taken at the close of the meeting.

L. H. Fussell, principal of the Magnolia schools, talked as the representative of the Magnolia Methodist church and presented Superintendent Johnson, who urged that parents impress upon and teach their children of the dangers possible from the use of alcohol.

Other speakers on the program included B. B. Wilson, Magnolia, Baptist church; J. J. Howard, Magnolia Freewill Baptist Church; Admer Lanier, Oak Vale Baptist Church; Mrs. F. F. Newkirk, Oak Plain Presbyterian Church. A significant duet was rendered by Mrs. Kenneth Taylor and Miss Melrose Gaylor, with Mrs. L. H. Fussell at the piano.

For having the most persons in attendance Carlton's Chapel church was presented a temperance banner by Miss Cox.

RURAL WOMEN IN STUDY OF CHAIRS

Miss Martin reported that she travelled 788 miles in conducting her work. Sixteen homes were visited and 44 were helped through calls at the office.

The subject for study during September was "Re-seating of Chairs", with the following points being demonstrated: the equipment needed; the material needed; the making of cane bottom chairs; and the use of rush, cattail flags, and corn husks in re-seating chairs. Following her demonstration the agent distributed miniature frames on which members could make chair bottoms.

During this month the agent's demonstration will continue the economic theme, being concerned with re-upholstery.

"That Little Ditch"

"Under the Dome" the News and Observer's personal daily feature, disgressing from personalities to politics, or from public opinion to public affairs, struck a nerve Sunday when it used the Town of Wallace to start off its Sabbath skit.

Introducing a massive volume issued the other day by Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, state relief administrator, in which a composite history of expenditures incurred in the administration of CWA and ERA projects, and the results obtained from the same, were several paragraphs concerning a "little ditch that runs through Wallace down in Duplin County."

The story asked if the reader remembered the project, for which a total of $5,720.78 was expended, and it proceeded to bring to mind the picture of conversation about a new relief program that paid laborers 40 cents an hour, and about shivering and hungry men standing around a red-hot stove while waiting to make application for CWA jobs, and about white and negro men with picks and shovels working on a project that cleaned that "small ditch".

Really, the ditch wasn't so small after all, for its meanderings are estimated to traverse a distance of between two and three miles. It's not narrow, either, varying from three feet to three yards. Its dimensions at the present time are not essential, but what we are interested in its the fact that scores of hungry and cold and needy persons were given employment on a project that meant untold benefits to citizenry, especially in its efforts to help our neighbors retrieve what they had lost under the misshapen guidance of the previous administration.

While the volume, we take it, is not primarily meant for political propaganda, it tells the complete story of what happened to the $39,000,000 allotted to the CWA and the NCERA. For $5.00 you can get a copy, or else read ours when it arrives, and learn of the Roosevelt administration's acute interest in assisting the laboring man, the common man, the warped farming man, and the palsied business man of our section.
