Tin City Is Loyal Wallace Neighbor

Is Home of Eight Progressive
Business Enterprises; Just Another Creditable Branch
Of Duplin Family

To the thousands of motorists and travelers along Federal Highway Route 117, from Goldsboro to Wilmington, there is, perhaps, not the faintest conception of the fact that, one mile out from Wallace they pass through, no doubt, the largest and biggest "Cross Roads" in the United States . . . still that name, in its old-styled sense, is, by no means, applicable to this hustling and progressive community. Rather, it is a "small edition" of a hustling "country city", where the people are up and a-doing.

The motorist might take it to be just another place to "tank up" and have his car serviced. But that does not cover its scope. If that same motorist would bide a while and visit the eight different business places of Tin City, he would better appreciate the fact that here in this so-called "Cross-Roads" he can buy just about any commodity or service that the average town affords. . . . merchandise and service covering the needs of, not only the motorist and his car, but all the needs of man, his family, his farm and his home!

There's Hubert Wells Service Station, dispensing Gulf products, providing a 24-hour service and operating a bazaar of varied lines of merchandise with which to service a man's car or satisfy his own physical needs and wants. Firestone tires and tubes and auto merchandise, and White's ice cream are leaders featured by Mr. Wells.

Across the way is Garland Kennedy, operating Kennedy's Place, featuring Standard Oil Products, and everything else in the line of need for the motorist and the traveler. Mr. Kennedy operates one of the most modern service stations in all this section. Rest rooms for both ladies and men are modern, sanitary and above the average, while hot and cold shower baths are another feature that has made his place known and popular with travelers everywhere.

A stone's throw from Kennedy's Place is the White Front Service Station, operated by W. B. Bonham, and featuring National Oil Company's products and Conoco gasoline and motor oils. Mr. Bonham also provides a dancing room and operates billiard tables. His place is noticeably attractive by its neat interior and an abundance of daylight.

Other Tin City business places, all modern and representative in their respective lines are: Arthur Raynor, groceries and feeds; Mrs. G. K. Duff & Son, general merchandise; G. D. Teachey, service station and general store; A. H. King, general merchandise, and the Tin City Garage, owned and operated by Fred Winner, and where a general automotive repair service is maintained. Mr. Winner specializes in auto parts and his place has become widely known and popular by reason of this, and his expert mechanical service.

All these Tin City business people are highly progressive in their methods and are public spirited citizens. Although a mile from Wallace, still they, in a sense, regard themselves a part of Wallace, and they are
