

Vet Services Delayed Due To Physician Need

Unsuccessful efforts to date to secure at least one or possibly two full time physicians have delayed plans for expansion of V. A. contact, rehabilitations and medical services in southeastern North Carolina.

Expansion proposals are expected to move full speed ahead as soon as two full time doctors and suitable office space are obtained.

Two present training officers, Edward T. Neel and Francis F. Thompson, may be assisted later by a training facilities officer assigned to further employment opportunities for disabled veterans under Public Law 16.

Two vocational advisers may be added later.

Contact expansion plans call for two contact representatives and two clerical assistants. Because of current V. A. personnel ceiling, staff additions will comprise only transfers within the service approved by V. A. regional headquarters office in Winston-Salem.

There must never again be a conflict between religion and science," said the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Fisher, recently. "Nor will there be if Christians hold to their faith that all truth is of God, and if scientists acknowledge that their truth is not the whole of truth . . . There are those who believe that whatever science can do, it has a sovereign right to do, and that by the unlimited application of scientific power all the human problems can be solved and all human needs be met. The falsity of this doctrine has been made obvious to all in the discovery of how to release nuclear energy. It is only too clear that the use of scientific knowledge must be governed by something other than its own possibilities. 'What ought man to do' is a more far-reaching and important question than 'what can he do!'" war and war-industries. Many thousands of these people are being rehabilitated by governmental agencies, and other thousands are being employed and trained in the Goodwill Industries. Mr. Friedman and his associates are busy calling the attention of business men and industrial leaders to the value of these trained workers in private enterprise. The goal of the Goodwill Industries, he says, is "to help handicapped persons to attain the fullest physical, mental, moral, emotional, cultural, spiritual, vocational, and economic development of which they are capable."
