Crystal-Gazers See The Future

The time is 1948. The place is Madame Salome's; she is a famous fortune teller. The crystal ball is slowly clearing, and we breathlessly wait to see what the future holds for the Senior Class of 1948. First we see a telephone switchboard and far down the line we see Edith Morse. She is putting through a call for Margaret Edgerton, who now owns the "Edgerton Store" on Arendell Street. Next, we see Watts Hospital and coming down the steps is Lukeyia Wade, the modern Florence Nightingale. She is going to the laboratory where Sidney Lentz, the famous scientist, is working on a new discovery. Two other nurses working at the hospital are Caroline Willis and Kathryn Swindell. As we walk in a drug store for a coke and newspaper, who should be behind the counter but Mary Allen Miller. As we look through the newspaper several names catch our attention, J. G. Bennett and Clarence Willis, the two promising young lawyers, are now working on their first important case. Herb on the sports page we see the familiar faces of Bill Marks, the outstanding football star, and J. D. Helms, the nation's No. 1 basketball player. On the woman's page is an editorial written by Mary Sue Tenney, the journalist who writes of life in general. The scene now changes and we see Grace Reel Piner, director of a teen-age center in New York. She is being greatly assisted by one of the Sampson boys. We see another large city and there is Jimmy Rabon, the great philanthropist of Miami Beach. Basking on Miami Beach we see Mary Ethel Seamon and Marianne Pate. They are very prominent in the Miami society circles. And who is the yellow, "Popcorn, peanuts, hotdogs?" It can be done other than Duffy Paul and Derl Roberts. After many attempts

Besides pictures of seniors, their history, prophecy, and will, the book carries reports on the year's sports program, pictures of freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and the various clubs, home economics, Beta, Boys' Hi-Y, Girls' Hi-Y, student council, glee club, library club, band and majorettes. Class Of '48 Ends Busy Year

The junior class entertained the seniors at the annual junior senior banquet at the Ocean King hotel April 30 and the seniors will play host to the juniors at a picnic at Atlantic Beach Wednesday. The major activity of the class of '48, besides the yearbook, was the class play, "Her Step Husband," which was given in April. Net profit was $212. The leads were played by Tarver McKnight, Bill Godwin, and Marianne Pate. Marianne became seriously ill soon afterward and only recently has recovered. Doctors diagnosed her case as typhus fever. Serving as officers of this year's senior class were Mary Sue Tenney, president, Norma Lewis, secretary-treasurer, and Bill Godwin, chaplain. The class chose as their mascots the twin son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Williams, Robert Ward Williams and Ann Ward Williams. Their Latin motto, Faber Est, Quisque Suae Fortunae, means "Each One is the Architect of His Own Fortune." Their class flower is gardenia and class colors are blue and white.
