Miss Rachel Brock Honored At Miscellaneous Shower

Mrs. Roma Styron, and Misses Viola Styron and Barbara Grantham, members of the Willis-Brock wedding party, entertained for Miss Brock with a miscellaneous shower at the civic center on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. Bingo was played during the evening with Miss Carolyn Taylor winning the grand prize, Blue Grass cologne.

Miss Brock was given a miniature bride's bouquet and a silver dish by the hostesses and Miss Mary Anne Turnage, another bride-elect, was remembered with a corsage and a silver covered candy dish.

Refreshments were served with coca cola, mints and nuts. Mixed summer flowers were attractively arranged throughout the club rooms.

Miss Brock received many lovely gifts from the thirty-five friends present.

Cake Cutting Given For Willis-Brock Wedding Party

Mr. and Mrs. Esmond Brock entertained with a cake cutting at the civic center Friday evening for members of the Willis-Brock wedding party and their friends.

White gladioli and other white flowers were used for decorations. After the first slice of wedding cake had been cut by the bridal couple, Mrs. Brock and Mrs. Darcy Willis served the three tiered cake which was placed on a lovely lace covered table and flanked by glowing white tapers in silver candelholders. A white wedding bell hung over the table from which white ribbon streamers flowed to the corners of the table.

Miss Jackie Wallace, of Charleston, S. C., presided over the punch bowl which was surrounded by book and for this Wednesday night at 8 o'clock the first chapter will be studied. Everyone is requested to bring his Bible, and to get the best results, bring along notebook and pencil. The public is invited to each service.

Now They Pay to Just Look At a Bungalow in New York

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK — (AP) — Remember when the real estate man used to beg you to look at a new house, when he'd drive you out and drive you back and thank you for coming?

Things are different now, as you may have noticed. In no place are they more different than in Manhattan. In this little island unloaded just in time by the Indians, people stand in line to look at new houses and frequently pay to do it.

In this borough of 2,500,000 people, the only one-family homes being built are houses New Yorkers can look at, not live in.

In Manhattan, a cozy little bungalow has become such a curiosity piece that until recently they had one model on display in a museum, Manhattan Idyl.

Right now, there's a 10-room, completely furnished, completely landscaped home on display at 48th St. and 5th Ave., an idyllic little half acre shaded by skyscrapers, throbbing with the noises of buses and cabs and human rope and planted himself on the couch, announcing: "Mommy, I like this place and I'm going to stay."

Mommy had to drag him out, bawling. At Wanamaker's, over a period of two and a half years, an estimated 2,000,000 people visited a floor completely devoted to eight completely furnished homes. They didn't pay to get in, but frequently waited long for a look-see.

A four and a half room bungalow, which drew heavy crowds at Gimbel's, also played to a quarter of a million spectators during one month at the Museum of Science and Industry, where it takes cash money to get in.

Last year, over a period of 12 weeks, another 2,000,000 people passed through a seven-room colonial model house on Columbus Circle, their more than $240,000 in donations going to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund.

They Want to Know!

Since April 1, this year, about 120,000 people each paid two bits, which went to the United Nations Overseas Fund for Children, to see a porcelain enamel steel house of five rooms on 52nd streets, a street usually devoted to jazz and swing. The house drew a motley crowd, including musicians, "the only Zulu Interpretative Dancer in America," as well as worried commuters with special problems.

One middle-aged lady made a 50-mile round trip 12 times to see the place. She said she wanted to study its reactions to changes in the weather. On the last visit, she sat in the living room to learn whether she could hear the rain on the steel roof.

Another woman, a bride from New Brunswick, N. J., came along, with a written set of questions supplied by her husband who was unable to attend. So far she's come 19 times, each time with new questions. A body can't be too careful.

Writer Demands Removal Of Foreign Labels on Goods

MOSCOW — (AP) — A writer in "Izvestia" called recently for the dropping of foreign labels from Soviet made products. "It is time," he said, "that a stop was put to this practice of insulting the work of Soviet engineers and workers by the affixing of foreign labels to native produce."

Among terms still in use, he said, were: Petit-beurre, petit-four, eclair, nice, arrow-root and osborne biscuits, cakes.

"Many goods in Leningrad cafes and restaurants bear foreign names as Metropole, Angletierre, Nord, Astoria etc.," he said.
