Rotarian Tells Of G. Washington

Beaufort Rotarians heard the biography of George Washington at their meeting Tuesday night in the Inlet Inn, the night of Washington's birthday. The speaker was Rotarian N. Thomas Ennett.

Dr. Ennett's informative talk included Washington's ancestry and his life as father of the new young America. Washington's forebears were English. His great great grandfather, was the Rev. Lawrence Washington of Sulgrave manor, North Hamptonshire, England. His great grandfather, John, at the age of 26 came to Virginia in 1657 as second mate on a sailing vessel. John's son Lawrence, was George Washington's grandfather. Lawrence's son Augustine was Washington's father — Washington's mother was Augustine's second wife, Mary Ball of Virginia.

George was born Feb. 22, 1732 in a four-room house at Bridges creek, Westmoreland county, on the Potomac river. At 14 he went to live at Mt. Vernon with his half brother, Lawrence, and there met Lord Fairfax and other aristocrats. At 16 he was doing surveying and at 21 fought in the French and Indian wars and was promoted to colonel.

In 1758, Washington met the widow of Daniel Parke Custis and married her the following year, 1759, when he was 26 years old. He resigned from military service and went to live at Mt. Vernon where he stayed until 1775 when he entered the revolutionary war as commander in chief of the Continental Army.

From April 30, 1789 until 1796 he served as President of the United States and three years later was claimed by death, Dec. 14, 1799. He was 67 years old and a wealthy man, having in his name 62,000 acres of land and the palatial mansion, Mt. Vernon.

Adolf Hitler Influences Few Parents In Austria

VIENNA — (AP) — The self-styled "Greatest of All Austrians" is leaving only a few namesakes in his native land. Even after Adolf Hitler took over the country in the 1938 Anschluss, his first name was not popular with new parents. The 100 per cent Nazis liked the nordic names of Horst, Dieter and Seigfried. Non-Nazis wanted nothing to do with the name.

A recent survey by government officials shows that parents are avoiding the name "Adolf" as they would the plague. The trend now is to forget the new-fangled nordic appellations and give offspring such old Austrian favorites as Franz, Josef, Leopold, Karl and Han.

The survey also shows that few girls are being named Karin and Edda, as they were during the Nazi occupation. Those are the names of Hermann Goering's first wife and daughter.

Official of Hygiene Laboratory Retires, Moves to Morehead City

By WILLIAM H. RICHARDSON

It is a far cry back to December 28, 1908, but the forty intervening years have been busy ones for James Willford Kellogg, the retiring assistant director of the State Laboratory of Hygiene. He and Mrs. Kellogg have taken up residence at 1607 Shepard street, in Morehead City, in a house recently purchased by them for their future home.

Although Mr. Kellogg is essentially a scientist and his official career in Raleigh has been coincidental with the growth of the laboratory since its establishment, he also has become a part of the community's fraternal, social, and religious life. When he joined the staff of the Laboratory in 1908, it consisted of just four people—the late Dr. Clarence Shore, director, Miss Daisy Allen, Fred Morgan and himself.

Prior to that time, some of the duties performed by the newly established laboratory had been carried on under different agencies, but when the laboratory came into being these services were coordinated.

One of the first things the laboratory did was to equip itself to make rabies examinations, and to prepare and give the Pasteur treatment. Prior to that time, persons bitten by dogs supposed to be rabid had to go to Richmond for treatment, if results in the dogs that inflicted the wounds were positive. Establishment of examination and treatment facilities in Raleigh, as can easily be understood, was not only a new but a distinct service to the people of this state.

From Thousands to Millions. The laboratory started out by performing various other functions, including hookworm examinations, sputum examinations for tuberculosis, diphtheria cultures, malarial examinations for typhoid, urinalyses, and pathological tissue examinations for malignancies.

Although this is not intended to be a history of the State Laboratory of Hygiene, any intimate sketch of a man who has served it since its existence of necessity must reflect its progress. It is interesting to note that, whereas the laboratory in 1908 measured its examinations by the hundreds, it now measures them in terms of millions, at an estimated saving to the taxpayers of North Carolina of several million dollars in services and materials channeled through the medical profession, each year.

Mr. Kellogg started out as assistant biologist, under Doctor Shore, the first director. As a matter of fact, the laboratory has only had two directors in its forty years of existence—Dr. Shore and the incumbent, Dr. John H. Hamilton. Upon Dr. Hamilton's assumption of the directorship, Dr. Kellogg was made his assistant and has served in that capacity ever since.

The retiring scientist is a native of New York state. He graduated from Hamilton college at Clinton, New York, and did post-graduate work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he was appointed assistant to Dr. William T. Edgewick, head of the Department of Biology. Just prior to coming to Raleigh, he was employed at the Washington, D. C., water filtration plant. He was single, as well as a young man, when he took up residence in North Carolina, and in 1912 he was married to Miss Rena Kirby, of Knoxville, Tenn., who had moved to Raleigh several years prior to that time.

Honored by Scientists As a scientist, Mr. Kellogg has risen high in the American Waterworks association, having served as chairman of the North Carolina section, also as director for the national association itself for three years. He has written articles for the Journal of the American Waterworks association, and has received the George W. Fuller Award for distinguished services, one of the association's highest honors. His continuity of service with the State Laboratory of Hygiene was interrupted during the First World War, in which he served as a captain in the Sanitary Corps of the Army in France.

As to his written contributions to science, he has prepared many articles on various subjects associated with laboratory work, notably typhoid fever and rabies. He and Mrs. Kellogg both are Presbyterians. Upon going to Raleigh, he associated himself with the First Presbyterian church there, taking an active interest in all of its endeavors. In due course, he was elected to the Board of Deacons. Later, he became a Ruling Elder. When White Memorial church was organized, he and Mrs. Kellogg were among those who went from the First church to comprise that new congregation.

Mr. Kellogg was raised to the degree of Master Mason in Raleigh Lodge No. 500, in 1910, since which time his interest in the fraternity has been continuous. His journey to the East began shortly after he was raised, and in 1914 he was elected Worshipful Master, serving through 1916. Again, in 1924, he was called upon to supervise the members of Craft in their labors.

For twenty-four years, he was secretary of Raleigh 500 which, in
