Fabrics For Slip Covers: Many cotton fabrics selling in stores this spring are ideal for slip covers because they are washable, durable, reasonable in price, and attractive in color and design. Slip cover material represents a considerable investment in money, labor, and time if homemade. Thus, it pays to choose fabric that not only suits the decorative scheme of the room but also wears well, washes without shrinkage, and holds its color against light and laundering. Dry cleaning adds to the cost of slip covers so it pays to use fabrics which can be laundered at home if necessary.

Closely woven fabrics hold their shape well. They are easy to work on and they tailor well and keep dust from sitting through to the furniture underneath. Loosely woven, sleazy fabrics which stretch, fray at edges and often pull out at seams, are difficult to make up neatly and are a poor protection against dust.

Some of the most serviceable cottons for slip covers are: permanently glazed chintz, cretonne, plain or striped denim, galatea, rep and French ticking. For a dressy appearance, lightweight tapestries, drapery saten and damask, ginghams and percales wash easily but often wrinkle more than heavier fabrics. They are good lightweight materials for slip covers but generally are only 36 inches wide, thus may not cut to as good advantage as wider materials.

If fabric is not labeled as pre-shrunk and fast color against light and laundering, it is wise to buy about three-fourths of a yard and launder it at home. Measure the fabric before and after laundering to see how much it shrinks. Note any loss of color. If shrinkable material still is the choice, it pays to wash and iron it before making up into slip covers.

Upper back and arms of chairs or lounges usually get the most soil and wear. So it often pays to buy enough extra fabric for pieces to baste flat on back and arms. These can be washed separately if necessary. Be sure the design of the extra piece and slip cover match so that these extras don't show.

Russians Hold French

STRASBOURG—(AP)—Several hundred Alsace-born youths, who were pressed into service with the German army after Hitler annexed Alsace-Lorraine in 1940, are still being held as prisoners "somewhere in Russia," local officials say. Most of them were still at school when the Nazi pangers swept into their rustic villages along the Rhine and in the foothills of the Vosges. Today the conscripts from Alsace and Lorraine find themselves pawn in the cold war between the western powers and Russia.

HOLLYWOOD... by Gene Handsaker

HOLLYWOOD—"The Asphalt Jungle," the most exciting crime movie in months, is a sharp reminder of how good the cops-and-robbers formula can be. It has a jewelry-store burglary that will practically stop your breathing. Part of the scene's suspense is from understatement; the muscle man doesn't fumble the vial of nitroglycerin, as you half expect him to. A lot is from the crooks' quiet competence—the safecracker calmly replacing a broken drill, the mastermind deliberately examining each tray of jewels before dumping them into his valise. And all the while, police-siren wails grow louder outside.

The asphalt jungle is a big city. A hulking stickup man and horseplayer (Sterling Hayden) becomes involved in the jewel theft. It is planned and expertly guided by a recently released convict (Sam Jaffe). Louis Calhern plays a bankrupt criminal lawyer whose role in the crime is to dispose of the loot. But he tries to double-cross his pals.

John McIntire portrays a hard-driving police commissioner, Jean Hagen the showgirl who loves Hayden, and James Whitmore, the proprietor of a cheap lunchroom. Max Lawrence plays a jittery big-time bookie. The performances of the entire cast are excellent. John Huston directed the picture from a screenplay co-authored by himself. It was based on a novel by W. R. Burnett. Exteriors were filmed in Cincinnati, O., and Lexington, Ky. Hayden, by the way, goes back to spelling his first name with an "e," its original family vegaon, instead of an "H."

Writer-director Richard Sale is a railroad enthusiast and model railroad builder. So is his writer wife, Mary Luos (daughter of Nacchet Anita). Their research on the West's early-day narrow-gauge roads suggested a movie plot which they wrote and he directed. "A Ticket to Tomahawk" is a merry thrill comedy starring Dan, Dalry and Anne Baxter. Dan plays a hep salesman traveling through Colorado back in 1876. Anne is the sheriff's sharpshooting daughter. The Sales have entertainingly combined several real-life pioneer incidents into their fictional story.

Chris Norris introduced Judge Hamilton who spoke on higher education and preparation.

The officers of the junior and senior classes and their escorts did the "May Pole" dance. Francis Mason, pianist, presented souvenirs to each senior and delivered the farewell address. A fund from Cherry Point furnished the music.

The festivities were directed by Miss Beulah Raspberry, junior class advisor.

Elementary School Group Stresses Improved Reading

In an effort to improve instruction in elementary schools, the Carteret County Elementary Planning committee was recently organized and decided that reading should be given more emphasis in the 1950-51 school year.

The committee pointed out that reading is essential in every subject such as history, geography, science and literature, and that progress in these subjects depends to a great degree on the ability of the pupil to read rapidly and intelligently.

Every elementary school teacher in the county has been notified of the committee's work. Fred Lewis, teacher supervisor, announced in the future other factors will be considered, he said, to improve instruction in the elementary grades.

New Year's Eve and New Year's Day together are known as the "dull days" in Scotland.
