Dogs Develop Encephalitis

their affliction is not rabies but encephalitis, or a type of virus of the brain, Dr. C. E. Paden, veterinarian, reported yesterday.

Dr. Paden said many people had become alarmed at symptoms in their dogs. However he emphasized, the animals are sul fering from encephalitis which has similar symptoms but does not have the barmful affect on humans that rabies has.

First symptoms of this disease he explained. After five or six days dog, if more than a year old, will recover after passing a stage where he experiences stiffness in the hind legs.

If the dog is less than a year old the veterinarian said, he will us ially go into convulsions and die However, if he does recover he will have a twitching paralysis and probably go blind.

There is no known preventative or vaccine for encephalitis, Dr. Paden continued. When an animal is found suffering from it, the vethas to relieve any misery that ex-
