Drive Will Continue Next Week, Mrs. Laurence Vickers Announces

The membership drive for the North Carolina Little symphony is progressing satisfactorily, Mrs. Laurence Vickers, chairman, re-ported today, and the drive will continue next week.

That will give the Beaufort Jun-ior Woman's club, which meets Monday night, more opportunity to contact prospective members there, Mrs. Vickers commented.

Challengers for the title of most-traveled group in the State disappear as rapidly as fried chicken at a church picnic when the record of the North Carolina symphony is mentioned.

"We covered 7,000 miles on our last tour and the season ahead may be even more comprehensive," says Mrs. Benjamin Swalin, represen tative of the Symphony society who was here recently to organize the annual membership drive. More than 120 concerts were played before thousands of highly-satisfied listeners last spring, in addition to 75,000 school children in every section of North Carolina.

Memberships in the society are now on sale at the civic center, Morehead City, and 121 Craven st., Beaufort.

"The orchestra appeared in som 66 communities from Manteo to Murphy," she said, "and during 1949-50 it visited Tennessee and Georgia. Millions heard the Symphony on NBC's feature program 'Pioneers of Musie' last April, which was broadcast overseas by the Voice of America.'

Last season was quite different from the one Conductor Benjamin Swalin led in 1943. "That pres were able to reach about 8,000 cnildren," Mrs. Swalin said. "The audiences have grown tremendously with the years, so much, in fact that last season the orchestra play-ed to students from 418 schools and performed in 67 schools."

The most rapid growth of the orchestra has been since 1945 due to its expansion program. It was then that the symphony was put on a professional basis. Since then, out-of-state engagements in Georgia, Tennessee and Virginia have been filled, and "pop" concerts have been popular "extras" in sev-eral towns on the regular tour. "Through articles and picture stories in Time, Pathfinder, the state press, and on the radio, the North Carolina Symphony is not only gaining national recognition for itself, but for all of North Carolina as well," Mrs. Swalin said
