Home Hints

By Ruth Current

Washing painted woodwork generally is scheduled for spring cleaning time. To protect and save the paint, home management specialists offer several suggestions:

Any paint can be damaged by strongly alkaline soap or other cleaners, abrasive powder and rubbing. Coarse scouring powder and strong cleaners remove or roughen the smooth outer surface of the paint so that it soils faster and is more difficult to clean. Strong alkali can weaken and also discolor paint. It is wise to try out any new cleaning preparation on an inconspicuous part of the paint first, carefully following directions that come with it as to how to use.

A mild neutral soap is satisfactory for washing paint. If scouring is necessary, finely powdered whiting is suggested because it is one of the finest abrasives and is inexpensive by the pound at paint, hardware or drug stores.

In washing paint, it is important to wash only a small area at a time and rinse carefully before moving on to another area. Even a mild soap contains some alkali that will eventually injure paint if left on it. Directions for some commercial paint cleaning preparations suggest that no rinsing is needed. Yet many are highly alkaline and will damage the surface if left on. Some cleaning solutions make the paint soft while it is wet and then rubbing can damage it. With such cleaners there may be less damage from leaving a very little cleaner on the surface than from rubbing while rinsing. Be sure to use only the amount of cleaner suggested in the directions.

Some of the new detergents, like soap are alkaline; others are slightly acid or neutral. They are satisfactory for washing painted surfaces in the kitchen or wherever a greasy film has formed.

When you buy a teakettle make sure that the handle is large enough and that you can grasp it easily. The outside surfaces of the teakettle should be smooth and easy to clean, since it is likely to get splattered often as it stands on the range.
