Raymond Massey Refuses Double in 'Sugarfoot'

It's not surprising that Raymond Massey earned the nickname of "Reckless Ray" as the result of some daring riding during the chase sequences in "Sugarfoot," Warner Bros. Technicolor outdoor drama, coming to the Beaufort theatre next week.

Massey startled everyone by nixing a double because he claimed he was capable of performing these feats himself. The popular "menace" actor once served in the cavalry of the Canadian Army and was later an instructor in cavalry tactics at Princeton and Yale universities.

"Sugarfoot," the picturization of Clarence Budington Kelland's famous story, stars Randolph Scott, with Adele Jergens.

Dale Robertson Makes Grade In Movies After Four Tries

It took four tries before handsome Dale Robertson made the grade in Hollywood.

"It was a case of everyone wanting me when Uncle Sam had me signed up, and no one wanting me when I got out of service," recalls the six-foot Oklahoman who currently rates co-star billing with Jeanne Crain, Mitzi Gaynor and Jean Peters in Twentieth Century-Fox's Technicolor comedy-drama of sorority life, "Take Care of My Little Girl," playing at the Beaufort theatre Sunday and Monday.

"I didn't blame anyone, either, because I didn't have a lick of theatrical experience—the only reason I was in demand was that the war had created a leading man shortage," he admits.

His attraction to movie agents came about when his mother wanted a picture of him before he went overseas with the 322nd Combat Engineers. He stepped into a Sunset Strip photographer's studio and his picture was snapped.

When the photographer put his picture in her window for advertising purposes, she was besieged for L. Robertson's camp address.

"A half dozen agents wrote wanting to get me a screen test," Dale says, "but I had a prior date overseas with General Patton's Third Army."

When Dale got out of the army in 1946, he found the situation had drastically reversed itself and acting jobs were scarce what with manpower available again. He returned to his family's ranch in Oklahoma and then tried Hollywood again to no avail. This commuting between Oklahoma and California went on four times before Nat Holt signed him to play Jesse James in "Fighting Man of the Plains."

Another Nat Holt enterprise, "Cariboo Trail," and Dale got himself a Twentieth Century-Fox contract and roles in "Two Flags West," and "Call Me Mister."

Featuring Jeffrey Hunter, Betty Lynn and Helen Westcott, "Take Care of My Little Girl" is based on a novel by Peggy Goodwin.

He Really Does It

Nimble-footed Fred Astaire, often accused by his fans of appearing to dance on air, does even better than that in M-G-M's new Technicolor musical, "Royal Wedding," which comes Sunday to the Morehead theatre. He dances on the ceiling! Danced to a new Burton Lane-Alan Jay Lerner tune, called "You're All the World To Me," the novel routine is one of the stop-the-show highlights of the new romantic tuner.
