"What A Wonderful Future I Will Have!"
"Yep . . . my future is going to be wonderful! I'm going to have things and go places. Why? It's simple. I've started a savings account . . . plan to add to it every pay day. You always seem to save more when you save regularly. And, a savings reserve of 'ready cash' gives you those extra dollars so helpful for emergencies, opportunities and the many things you want or need."

Hancock
in 1943 during his service with the Coast Guard.
"I have even inquired if I could go to school under the GI bill of rights, even though the time for my starting schooling under the GI bill had expired," Hancock continues. "But that way I could get some money and pay it to my wife."
He says his back periodically becomes stiff and sore to such an extent that he can't move. On Aug. 12, 1943 he was X-rayed by Dr. R. H. Hackler, Tayloe hospital, Washington, when his back started giving him trouble.
In a statement dated April 12, 1951, Dr. L. W. Moore, Beaufort, said, "It is very apparent that this man has not been able to do any work, even though he has tried and is now in worse condition than he was when examined July 1946."
Dr. William J. Wilson, Wilmington, in a letter dated Aug. 11, 1950, stated that Hancock was "in need of laminectomy and removal of the disc."
Congressman Contacted
Hancock has appealed to Congressman Barden to intervene in his behalf, sending the congressman the statements given him by civil service officials when he was discharged from Cherry Point.
"I can't appeal my case from superior court here in Carteret county, because the time for appeal has lapsed. The first time I went in court I didn't have a lawyer because I couldn't afford it," Hancock states.
Judge Leo Carr, in ordering the judgment handed down by Judge Morris to be carried out, recommended that Hancock have a physical examination and not be required to work at hard physical labor in prison unless his physical condition permits.
At present Hancock says he believes his wife, who has their 2-year-old son, John Melvin Hancock, is working in Charlotte.
He said, "I've even tried to enlist in the Coast Guard again, but they wouldn't take me. I'll do anything, any type of work I can," he repeated. "Even though they might put me in a hospital if I serve my prison sentence, I don't want that against me."

Boys' Sweaters Feature Bright Color, Bold Pattern
The big news in sweaters for grammar school boys is the coming of bright, lively color and novel patterns in all models. More and more, fireman red, bold green and blue are being mingled in "knock your eye out" combinations.
The cardigan offers a happy new outlook with patterns taking the shape of everything from birds in flight to bands of contrasting colors that may take their cue from his school's own banner.
Long sleeve pullovers, too, serve a cheer-up as well as warmth-keeping purpose, with multi-hued argyle plaids, woven reindeer prancing around and even colorful bucking broncos in action right there on the front of his sweater.

Safety Director Speaks

Proper Tools Play Important Part in Child's School Work

By Pricella Ruth
They are small things, seemingly trivial when compared to everything else, but proper school supplies play a vital role in a child's acceptance and enjoyment of school.
They are the tools with which the school child is expected to do his work, and the role they play in his life is quite comparable to the part played by tools in the life of any adult craftsman.
The wise parent makes the buying of school supplies a happy educational experience, using it as one to create correct attitudes in the child and for building a pride in possessions with which he works that will make for smoother, happier progress.
What better occasion for teaching good buying habits than letting the youngster decide between one notebook and another, or, choosing the pen he will like best from the many available.
Good school materials are rarely costly, so that the price tag isn't pressing and the feeling of satisfaction in making these grown-up decisions is well worth the difference in cost.
Be Fully Equipped
But most important of all is to make sure that the child is fully equipped with the "tools" he's going to need in class.
Children by nature are conventional. Pity the youngster who has no marbles when the marble season rolls around. Pity the child who goes to class without a well-filled pencil box, tablets and notebooks he'll need, and the school kit bag in which he will carry them and his books.

Many school materials such as tablets, school bags and pencil kits, feature favorite heroes or characters from the entertainment world. Allowing the small child to have those decorated with the ones he likes best, helps his pride and doesn't harm his interest in school work. In fact it may help stimulate the latter because it means he'll have more fun using what is required.

Beside such accepted items as pencils, tablets, note books and filler paper, school bags and briefcases for books, there will be need for colored crayons, paints and paint brushes and pens.
The automatic pencils, some with several different colors of leads, will be prized possessions. The lunchbox is a must.
Something really extra special and yet very significant to the training of all children would be a portable typewriter for use at home. There's nothing better to teach interest in spelling and neatness.
Good Dictionary
Every home where there is a school child should have a good dictionary. Buy it specially for the child and encourage him in the use of it, and it will prove immensely important to his education.
A leading child psychologist has pointed out that the normal child looks forward to school, for that is where his friends are.
Helping him to enjoy school by equipping him with the proper tools, in which he will take pride, makes the educational road smoother.

Colorful Mufflers
Knitted mufflers, selected in junior's school colors, will appeal to his loyalty for his alma mater and at the same time keep mother's mind at rest with the knowledge that he is proud to wear this practical draft protector.
Scholars say that introduction of the iron axe into Scandinavia made it possible for the people to build ships with which they raided the coasts of Europe.
