M. F. Perry, Curator, Begins Work on Fort Macon Museum

M. F. Perry, historian and ar-+ reported Friday that the interior museum work at the fort will be in four parts: fortifications prior to Fort Macon, construction of the present fort, the war period, and Macon since the war between the states.

Perry is most enthusiastic about the work and has already turned up numerous interesting facts, maps, photographs, and drawings. In Raleigh he uncovered a sheaf of photographs believed to be the ear-liest known pictures. They were taken in 1866. Three water colors of the fort and the immediate area, done by a Yankee soldier in 1863, have also been found.

There are photostats of the original maps made in Washington, D. C. and water colors of Fort Hampton, Macon's predecessor, Some of these items have come to light at Raleigh in the state museum and others at the nation's capital.

plays will show how soldiers spent leisure time at the fort, how they dressed, and what they fought with.

Perry is earnestly hoping to lo-cate the "post cemetery." The by a sentry who believed him an intruder, and also a young girl whose body was washed ashore.

Another fond hope of Macon's historian and archaeologist is to find some authentic cannon to mount on the battlements. Perry expresses despair on this point, however; he says locating such weapons almost a hundred years later and three wars since the civil war, is practically an impossibility.

Perry believes that residents of this area can shed lots of light on clouded facts about Macon. He is also interested in obtaining relics. Persons who have relics with Fort Macon significance who would like to loan or give them for dis-play should write M. F. Perry, Curator, Fort Macon State Park.

The exterior of the fort will not be completely restored. One portion will be left as it is now so that sightseers will be able to note the contrast between the restored the and the original.

Supplementing the museum ita more formal history booklet of the fort which will be sold for about 50 cents. The curator is planning too a catalogue with a card for each soldier stationed at the fort at the time of its surrender to Northern forces.

Perry, a graduate of William and Mary college, is a native of Bertie county, but has lived most of his life in Virginia. He did graduate work at William and Mary and then became associated with Colonial Williamsburg as craft shop assistant and later archaeological assist-nt in charge if the archaeological
