Texas University Conducts State Geography Lesson

Austin, Tex. (AP)—The University of Texas Department of Geography helped settle the question of how many states have capitals closer to Amarillo than the Texas capital at Austin.

Dr. Donald Brand, geography professor, said the answer is three. With a big globe and calipers Dr. Brand's assistants measured these geographic airline distances: Amarillo to Santa Fe, N. M.—230 miles; Amarillo to Oklahoma City, Okla.—240 miles; Amarillo to Denver, Colo.—355 miles.

Amarillo in the Texas Panhandle is 415 miles from Austin. All other capitals were farther away than Austin. Topeka, Kan., however, ran a close race at 425 miles distant.

In the South there is an estimated 70 million acres of idle and sub-marginal crop land that could be profitably converted to pasture.

A half pound of nitrate of soda mixed with a bushel of sawdust makes a good mulch for newly set trees and shrubs.

Brain tissues in human beings is insensitive to pain and can be cut without the owner of the brain being aware of it once the skull is penetrated.

Graduation is the time for rejoicing. Not that we may throw away our books, forget about our homework, make sneering faces at our teachers without fear or punishment. But . . . rejoice that we have come to that point in life where we rightfully assume our responsibility in that state of existence called humanity. Until . . . now we have had our lives directed for us—our time planned, our obligations assumed. Even our very thoughts have been supervised and directed. Many . . . of you will go on to further learning, making your own decisions and later being the backbone of our nation. We are confident that you will make this a better place in which to live. So, with that thought in mind, we want to congratulate the Class of 1952 because we know you are the calibre of person that does things well.
