are to be used for base maps for soil and water conservation work being done through seil conserva-tion districts. He explained that the other counties to be photographed in the northeastern part of the state are Pasquotank, Camden, Currituck; and Pamlico. Sections of the aerial photographs are finally enlarged to show a single farm or a group of farms on a scale of one inch to 660 feet, Garrett says. That size is suffi-ciently clear to show all major landmarks on a farm. These are used for mapping land conditions to show present land use and capability of each acre on a farm.

After having figures and symbols placed on it to indicate the capability in each place, the map of a farm is then colored to show at a glance the type of crop which is best suited at any given spot.

"This information," according to
'Garrett, "must be the basis for any varrett, "must be the basis for any successful attempt at soil and water conservation, A considerable saving of money is possible through use of aerial photographic maps. They are better and cost only a fraction of what it would be to make them some other way."

Sgt. John Pickett was fined $50 and costs in superior court after charge of issuing worthless checks. Pickett was accused of passing $850 in bad checks last August at the Morehead City race track.

Pickett has since paid the track the money which he obtained by cashing the checks. The defendant testified that he assed the checks in good faith. He said that he thought he had enough money in the bank to cover the checks. He planned to transfer funds from a Fayetteville bank to the Jacksonville bank on which the checks were drawn.
