Club Meets

Twins may dress alike, act alike and look alike, but they don't always think alike. And that's what makes this a wonderful country—most people reserve the right to think for themselves. Americans do not like to be regimented or herded into mass thinking. But they have no objection if their best friend disagrees with them on major issues.

That's why lots of young adults, who enjoy choosing sides for anything from football to parlor games, like to busy themselves with politics. Over all the country you will see buttons such as 'I Am Ike' or Stevenson being worn by students who conduct rallies and soap-box meetings to propound their theories on their favorite candidates, even if they are not of voting age. Many of them work at local political headquarters.

It is a good healthy sign for young people to actively engage in politics. By the time they get around to pulling a lever down in a polling booth, they might know something more of what makes this nation tick, and who are qualified best to keep it ticking with a good sound heart beat.

Here are some of the reasons given by young people for choosing Ike or Adlai . . .

From young people helping at the New York Eisenhower-Nixon headquarters come these reasons:

Says Carol Corcoran, age 19:

"In my opinion, the one issue that affects everybody in this country, regardless of race, color or creed, is the Korean war. Every one of us has a loved one either in that war, or earmarked for it. The policy now is to send them to Korea where they fight and die, and then new boys come in and take their place—and so the cycle continues. There must be a stop to this—there must be a better plan. Eisenhower won the last war. He knows war far better than Governor Stevenson does—he will know how to win this one. Let's get the youth of America home again."

Sydney Weaver, 16 1/2, says:

"General Dwight D. Eisenhower is to me the only man capable of being the next president of the United States. . . I was terribly annoyed that in some of the southern states the Democratic candidates are running on a white supremacy ticket. Democracy means freedom for all. . . Secondly I believe Gen. Eisenhower is the only man to stop Korean war and communist aggression. . . How can a man like Stevenson, so unknown to the world, ever hope to end the confusion in the world? . . . Thirdly, I believe Eisenhower to be just the man with enough determination to stop rising prices before the dollar is worth less than five or ten cents."

Pat Tuohy, age 20, says:

"We need a man who is honest, courageous and uncorrupted by political deals—someone who will put the interests of the United States above everything. That man is Gen. Eisenhower."

From young people actively working in Stevenson's New York

headquarters come these reasons for their choice:

Says Lois D. Goldsmith, 19 1/2:

"I am for Adlai Stevenson because he promises the American people only what he sincerely believes he can fulfill for them. He realizes, among other things, that taxes cannot be reduced without harm being done to national security. Other candidates must realize this fact but have not got the backbone to admit it. They even claim they can do the impossible. We need in the White House a man who will face the problems of this country without rose-colored glasses, and then go on to remedy the ills of the country without killing the patient. This is why I am for Adlai Stevenson."

Says Ruth Rafael, 18:

"Although I am not of voting age, I'm very interested in the forthcoming election. Gov. Stevenson has shown in his own state that he has the executive ability necessary for the highest office in the United States. He faces issues squarely and doesn't avoid unpleasant questions. Most important, he has wholeheartedly endorsed Civil Rights, despite considerable antagonism from the south. We need a man like Stevenson for our president."

Says Natha Lee Blum, 18:

"I am working for and backing Adlai E. Stevenson because he is intelligent, honest, and able, taking orders from no one and expressing his feelings whether or not his audience agrees with him. We need such a man to defend us from communism and to lead us through these difficult times."

Home Hints

Summer Hats

Where have you stored them? How have you stored them? Have you poked them down in a box or thrown them on a closet shelf to collect dust and soil until next spring?

Right now is the time to dry clean your hats—remove dust—remove veils (press and roll them up in tissue paper). Flowers can be made fresh by steaming (hold over a pan of boiling water for a few minutes). Inside hat bands should be replaced, dry cleaned, or better still removed and washed.

A clean hat box, clean hats, veils pressed, flowers freshened, all packed away in tissue paper—come spring, hats are ready without fuss or worry.
