Walks Into Hospital

Smith, they said, was able to walk from the car into the hospital. While he was in the emergency room he told the officers that "some boys" shot him.

When he was asked who the boys were he said they were Bobby Gene Mason and James Gillikin. In reply to the question, "What happened?"
Smith said, according to Assistant
Chief Garner, "It was my fault."
He told the officer that he knew the two boys were in the Mason house alone and he went there to scare them. He said he went to the front of the house and then around to the back, making believe that he was trying to get in.

Assistant Chief Garner said Smith told him that he was on the back porch when he was shot from with-in the house. He said he ran off the porch and went to the Rhue-home which is located back of the Mason house. Rhue then called the police station.

Because the Beaufort police were on patrol, the Morehead City sta-tion took the call and radioed the

After Assistant Chief Garner and

Officer Beachem left the Morehead City Hospital, they reported the shooting to Smith's mother and then took donors to the hospital to give blood to the victim.
