Fisheries

(Continued from Page 1) than that of any like period in our history. The production this season was 5,514,428 pounds with heads-off as compared to 3,482,627 last year. The quality has been excellent and price very good.

Clams: This was a poor production season and one of the reasons for it was that most of the watermen were engaged in shrimp-fishing. Clamming is very hard work and men will not engage in it if other kinds of fish are more profitable. This season clams were imported from Long Island to enable our larger clam dealers to meet their contracts.

Crabs: Our figures are not complete on this activity and for that reason the production we give is misleading. We did not get the data from two of our largest production points in time to include in this report. However, it is my opinion that we had a normal season this year.

Scallops: The production of scallops this period was far greater than that of any year lately-producing 4,850 gallons this year against 595 gallons last year. The price of our scallops was disappointing though the quality was very good. A much greater production than usual was made near the northern markets which resulted in a low average price for our scallops.

Food Fish: The production of food fish fell off 5,000,000 pounds from our catch last year. I believe this decrease was due very largely to the constant activity in the shrimp fishery. However, the money value for the individual crews was doubtless as good if not better than last year.

Menhaden: During November and December, especially during the latter month, tremendous schools of this fish were off our coast and except for unfavorable weather the catch would have exceeded very greatly any catch during a like period in the history of the industry. The production covered by this report was 176,714,000 fish as against 38,000,000 for the latter half of last year.

Menhaden Solubles: The product, solubles, is manufactured from menhaden fish water; that is, from water contained in fish, pressed out with the oil and then separated. This product contains high protein value, vitamins A & B and amino acids. It also has a tremendous growth factor. This by-product has solved a large problem in the soybean feed industry. Earlier, soybean oil was pressed from the soybean leaving about 5 per cent oil in the meal. Now Hexane is used in extracting oil from the soybean which makes the meal very dry for use. However, when this meal is mixed with solubles it becomes a fine feed for hogs and chickens. Solubles contain about 50 per cent water and are shipped in tank car lots.

..but I can't use 10 hats at a time!

Of course no one buys and wears ten hats at a time.

The picture is used because it pretty well illustrates the situation that would confront most businesses if it weren't for truck service.

Now the retailer—and manufacturer or wholesaler for that matter—doesn't have to tie up his capital in huge inventories, or buy expensive warehouse space. He buys smaller shipments, more often—and he can get fast replacement of out-of-stock items by truck. As a result, he carries more lines, and the goods are up-to-the-minute in freshness, fashion and salability.

This is true in the smallest far heel community as well as the biggest cities of the state. This freedom to buy—when he wants and in the quantities he needs—has benefited him, and his suppliers and his customers.

Next time you're in a store of any kind note the variety of items offered for sale. Truck service gives you a greater choice... just as it brings everything within reach of everyone, everywhere. If you've got it... a truck brought it!
