Rough Seas Spell Death, Injury for Sabrina Crew

Two crewmen were killed and three others injured on the Panamanian tanker Sabrina Saturday night off Cape Hatteras. The Sabrina, a tanker under charter to the Standard Oil Co. was in port at Morehead City in January.

The tanker made port at Wilmington Sunday night and the dead and injured were removed. The Sabrina is owned by a German firm and has a crew of mixed nationality. The 83-foot Coast Guard cutter from Oak Island met the ship at Southport.

The deaths were caused, the Coast Guard says, by rough seas. One crewman, they say, was swept from the deck and the other was killed on deck. The dead were identified as Dunnar Oestberg, a Finnish seaman and Friedrich Eden, a German.

Injured were Chief Mate Heins Zoetzache, 39-year German, slight injury of the right hand; German seaman Constantine Kaiser, 44, head injury, and Norwegian seaman Kjell Kristofferson, 23, head injury.

The three men were taken to James Walker Hospital, where Dr. D. R. McEachern, U. S. Public Health Service doctor, reported "they are all in satisfactory condition." He added, however, that Kaiser and Kristofferson "will remain under observation for a few days" to determine the extent of their injuries.

posed curtailment of air service here in May and September.

Chief of Police M. E. Guy requested the board's support in a bicycle safety program. Glenn Adair was appointed to work with him.

Mr. Walker announced that 143 inquiries received by the chamber have been answered since the last meeting. He also said that pony penning pictures supplied by the chamber will appear in the book, "Following Printed Trails by Hovious," published by D. C. Heath Co.

The manager read the board the February report on Finer Carolina projects and reported on the amount of money brought into the county through the chamber-initiated social security project.

In social security payments in the 11-county district of which Carteret is a part, the county stood ninth in 1951 and in 1952 stood third. Payments increased by $96,266 from 1951 to 1952, an increase of 78 per cent. Fifty per cent of that increase was due to work done by the B&PW Club in asking people to check with their social security representative, Mr. Walker said.

The board directed the manager to write D. W. Taylor of West Palm Beach and offer their assistance in organization of the Sea Level Community Chamber of Commerce. They directed that a copy of the letter be sent to J. A. DuBois who has been named manager.

Directors attending the meeting were E. W. Downum, Gerald Hill, Dr. W. L. Woodard, J. O. Barbour, Odell Merrill, Halsey Paul and Braxton Adair.
