Tonight Juniors Will Honor Seniors at Annual Grand Banquet

Tonight is the night! The Beaufort High School Juniors will honor the seniors with the annual Junior-Senior Banquet.

Regardless of the sponsoring class, the banquet has always been one of the biggest events in the school year and certainly one of the most spectacular.

As if by magic, the gymnasium is transformed into an exotic setting arranged especially for the class theme. Literally speaking, a new and complete room is built inside the gym.

To see a banquet is to remember it with a special combination of feelings—warm pleasure for its gaiety and a painful awareness of its briefness.

Here it is—more details about those science activities. It was rumored last week that a petition was going around to have the chemistry department banished, and it came as no surprise.

For the past couple of weeks sulphur and its many compounds have been made and studied in the laboratory. At the very start of these experiments, the pungent odors made their way down the hall so stealthily, yet with such force, that Mr. Tarkington rushed from his typing class to rescue the first chemistry section from what he thought was an explosion.

Luckily, there had been no such thing. It was just sulphur dioxide. A couple of days later came the hydrogen sulphide, you know, the rotten egg aroma.

Actually, the 68 remaining chemistry students, (there were 72 before transfers and drops occurred), are to be congratulated. With the three sections working as individuals or in pairs whenever possible, there has not been more than a very minor accident all year.

Most of the students have developed the habit of being careful and have found that it has paid off.

Biology classes are now in the midst of a unit on heredity. Johnnie Hardesty as a part of her home project has incubated chicken eggs, and she boarded her bus each day last week with her egg snugly wrapped in a heavy towel and lying on top of a hot water bottle.

The egg was then opened during the second period for the class to see. The group saw the heart beating on Monday in a three-day chick.

Each day brought more developments until Thursday, with a 138-hour chick, the wing and leg buds were quite visible. The heart in this embryo continued to beat most of the school day.

Sammy Magill has acquired a pair of guinea pigs on which he is going to run some diet experiments for his biology project this year. John Miller is setting up a desert terrarium.

Besides his casti, he has a giant Mexican collared lizard which is showing a craving for meal worms.

The 39 general science folks, having a class too large to be squeezed in in the 24-desk laboratory, have to be content with teacher-demonstration experiments.

Last week they learned what happened to the food they ate by using synthetic digestive juices. These first year science folks are also working on projects on the outside.

Theirs and those of the biology students will be displayed in the science department following the next Parent-Teacher Association meeting.

The two eighth grades, with their teachers, Mrs. Richard Babcock and Mr. Norman Chadwick, and Mrs. C. T. Lewis, Mr. Babcock and Mr. Harry Willis took a bus trip to Raleigh and Chapel Hill Friday. They visited the State Museum, the Capitol, had a picnic luncheon at Pullen Park and visited the Morehead Planetarium at Chapel Hill.

Secretarys elected for the various phases of the society's work are: promotion, Mrs. Ben Jones; missionary education and service, Mrs. D. F. Merrill; Christian social relations and local church activities, Mrs. N. F. Eure; student work, Mrs. R. W. Safrin Jr.

Youth work, Mrs. J. D. Young; children's work, Mrs. Calvin Jones; spiritual life, Mrs. W. L. Bell; literature and publications, Mrs. James Potter III; supply, Mrs. J. H. Johnson; status of women, Mrs. W. A. Chipman; membership, Mrs. B. C. Murphy; publicity, Mrs. Roy Hamilton.

Preceding the business meeting, members of the student prayer group at Beaufort High School presented a symbolic Easter play, which had also been presented at the school.

Plans were discussed for the sub-district conference meeting, for which the Ann Street Church women will be hostesses Tuesday.
