The center is being built by the Episcopalian Layman's Association of Eastern Carolina and will be turned over to the diocese upon its completion. It will serve as a year-round recreation area for children and adults.

The teachers registered for the course yesterday at Camp Glenn. Each of the four courses offered will last two weeks. B. B. Brandt, professor of zoology at N. C. State, will conduct the marine life in the coastal waters class which began yesterday and will run through July 16.

W. G. Steele, professor of geology at N. C. State, will teach historical geology of the coastal plains. This course will start July 19 and end Aug. 3.

Aug. 2 through 13 Mr. Brandt will conduct classes in biology and conservation of marine animals and Mr. Steele will teach geology of the coastal plain.

Mr. Starnes has announced that enrollment in classes will take place every two weeks. Each course is worth two semester hours credit.

Arrest

from behind a pistol, forced two women tellers, the cashier and a customer to shed their outer clothing in an effort to cover his getaway.

"Things happened so fast that I didn't realize what I had done until I was on the way back to Goldsboro. I really hadn't intended to do it until the next day," said Tyndall.

He admitted carrying out the robbery alone after Nelson had been forced to enter a veterans hospital for treatment.

Following the robbery, he and Nelson had counted the money together and later gone to Morehead in a 1954 Ford paid for by Tyndall out of the stolen money. Tyndall said he had placed an order for the car before making plans to rob the bank.

Quit School

Tyndall dropped out of high school in the eighth grade when he developed tuberculosis. He was treated at the Wayne County TB Annex for about a year and later joined the Air Force. Following a year's service he was discharged when AF authorities discovered he had tuberculosis.

Tyndall's parents were divorced several years ago and his mother has since remarried. He has been reported staying at a boarding house for some time.

Captain Newsome said that the FBI contacted him about 4:20 Friday afternoon while he was out on patrol and said that they would be in Morehead City in a short while. Captain Newsome met them at the police station.

Rowles

10 o'clock and started back to Beaufort. Fulcher said that about 150 yards south of the oil terminal dock the boat sprang a leak and all of a sudden the skiff sank from under them.

Fulcher said he told Rowles to take his clothes off, thinking that would help him to keep afloat. He told the coroner that they swam and floated an hour or longer but were drifting farther and farther apart.

Lose Contact

He said he had to shout to Rowles then to keep contact with him but soon Rowles failed to answer. Fulcher said he was getting exhausted so he started to holler and it was about midnight that E. T. Willis, Crab Point, watchman at the oil terminal, heard his cries.

Mr. Willis phoned the Morehead City police station and the police called Fort Macon. The Coast Guard sent out the 40-footer with Gerald Salter, B/M 1, Davis, in command. With him were Gerald Hord, E/M 2, and Seaman Wildenrad.

They picked up Fulcher after locating him with their search light. He was swimming about 75 yards off Radio Island in vicinity of the oil terminal dock. They continued for 45 minutes to look for Rowles but could not find him.

Fulcher was taken to the Coast Guard Station where he was picked up by Capt. George Smith of the Atlantic Beach police and taken to the Morehead City police station. There he was met by persons from Harkers Island.

Fulcher's boat has not been recovered as yet. Only his gas tank and tank cap have been found.

Serving on the coroner's jury tomorrow night will be C. L. Beam, E. L. Downum, Orville Gaskill, Robert Neal Willis, N. A. Avery, all of Beaufort, and M. M. Ayscue, Morehead City.

D. E. Taylor, president of the West India Fruit and Steamship Co., his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Taylor, his brother and sister-in-law, and Mr. and Mrs. Dussacs, friends of the Taylors, arrived in Morehead City via private railway car and attended the fish fry at the Sea Level Hospital Saturday afternoon.

The car, owned by the West India Fruit and Steamship Co. is named "Sea Level," as is the Taylor yacht. Mr. Taylor, his father and brothers, formed the Taylor Foundation and built the Community Hospital at Sea Level. The hospital opened in November.

When Robert Young recently gained control of the New York Central Railroad, Mr. Taylor was named to the board of directors of the New York Central.

The Taylors plan to be here most of the week.

Residents, Tourists Enjoy Holiday on Coastal Waters

Residents of the county experienced a relatively quiet Fourth of July weekend. They and thousands of tourists celebrated the weekend on the beaches and waterways of the county.

Atlantic Beach played host to thousands of up-staters but reported no fatal accidents of any kind and only three arrests.

According to Dan Jones, state park superintendent, the park had fewer visitors than had been expected. He estimated Saturday's crowd at 4,000 and Sunday's at 5,000. He said that yesterday's crowd was the largest of the weekend. Approximately 8,000 persons visited the Fort Macon area.

One of the biggest crowd-getting events in the area was the fish fry and boat race at Sea Level. The event drew 2,000 people, according to Marshall Whisnant, Sea Level hospital administrator.

Winners of first place prizes in the boat races were Rogers Willis, Harkers Island, Jimmy Golden, Davis, and Wes Jones, Morehead City. Mr. Willis took first place in the inboard motorboat class while Mr. Golden garnered a first in the fishboat class. Mr. Jones came in first in the 14-foot boat race. First-place winners received $25 each.

Mr. Whisnant termed the Sea Level outing "a big success."

The Sea Level fish fry and boat race was staged for the benefit of Sea Level's new hospital. The fish fry was held on the grounds of the hospital and the races on Nelson's Bay.

Approximately 300 persons attended the Shackleford pony penning in which 53 ponies were rounded up. Ten of the ponies were sold.

The deep sea fishing in the Gulf Stream was reported to be good Saturday and yesterday. The water was a little rough Sunday.

Catches of amberjack, dolphin, and kings were reported along the waterfront at Morehead City. All of the big boats and most of the little boats were chartered for the weekend.

Members of the State Highway Patrol in this area reported that, although there was plenty of traffic over the weekend, the traffic was not as heavy as had been expected. They reported that the traffic was orderly and drivers were doing a good job in guiding their vehicles safely.

Stanley Woodland, Morehead, Retires

Stanley Woodland, Morehead City, has retired. He relinquished Thursday his positions in the L&L Coal Co., Beaufort. He was secretary-treasurer and a member of the board of directors.

Mr. Woodland says he's been working "a long time." He added, "I've got a lot of fishing to do and a lot of golf to catch up with," so he's looking forward to retirement with pleasure.

Mr. Woodland has been affiliated with the L&L Coal Co. for the past eight years. He is still retaining his interest in the Beaufort and Morehead Railroad of which he is president.

Prior to his affiliation with L&L Coal Co., Mr. Woodland engaged in various enterprises in the county. In the early 1930's when International Public Utilities was organized to buy the Beaufort and Morehead City light and water plants, Mr. Woodland was instrumental in the purchase transaction and managed the plants until their sale to Tidewater Power Co.

He was a major figure in the building of the Morehead City port in 1934-36 and after the Atlantic and North Carolina took over from the Southern he became assistant to the president of the road and was assistant to the chairman of the Morehead City Port Commission.

After the A&NC was leased to the East Carolina about 1937, Mr. Woodland took over the North Carolina Fisheries and fostered development of the county's clam-shipping industry. The N. C. Fisheries was located on highway 70 just east of Morehead City.

Mr. Woodland said that the Heinz and Campbell soup people were contacted relative to purchase of clams and the fisheries experimented, successfully, with ways of shipping frozen clams and frozen clam juice. The N. C. Fisheries was a state agency and not interested in engaging in private enterprise and the business was eventually sold.

Mr. Woodland was governor of the 279th Rotary District last year. He has been president of the County Tuberculosis Association since its organization, took an active part in the Boy Scout program for 20 years, and has been active in the Episcopal Church.

A member of St. Andrew's, Morehead City, Mr. Woodland has been chosen as the layman representative, East Carolina Diocese, to attend the Anglican Congress Aug. 4-13 at Minneapolis, Minn. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Woodland.

He commented that he is extremely pleased and honored to be chosen as an official delegate to the meeting. There will be representatives there from the 350 Anglican Dioceses of the world.
