Sixteen Newport firemen recently attended a fire extinguisher demonstration in Newport presented by Lloyd N. Garner, Cherry Point Fire Department lieutenant.

Six different types of extinguishers were explained and demonstrated in the special meeting, part of the summer training for Newport firemen, at the Newport Fire Station. Cut-away models of soda-acid, foam and carbon dioxide extinguishers were used during the demonstration.

Three "model" fires were built and members of the department had a chance to use the various types of chemical on the fires. One fire was a Class A or wood fire. The other two fires were gasoline and oil fires, and listed as Class B. Extinguishers demonstrated were the one-quart carbon tetrachloride, the two-and-a-half gallon soda-acid, the two-and-a-half-gallon foam, the five-gallon back pack Indian water pump, the 15-pound carbon dioxide, and the 20-pound dry chemical.
