Pine Straw or Hardwood Leaves Are Good Mulches

By ROBERT SCHMIDT

Here is some more about mulches:

At our recent nurserymen's school there was much discussion about the use of sawdust and peat for mulching shrubs and for incorporating with the soil as a source of organic matter. Most of this pertained to the care of azaleas and camellias which are very popular at the present time.

It was pointed out that sawdust and peat are not as desirable as mulches because they may become packed and hard and water will not penetrate them when in this condition. Pine straw or partially rotted hardwood leaves make a satisfactory mulch.

On the other hand, sawdust — preferably old sawdust — and peat are good materials to incorporate with the soil as a source of organic matter. Both will make the soil reaction somewhat more acid which is desirable for azaleas and camellias.

However, it must be kept in mind that in the rotting of the peat or sawdust the bacteria use up nitrogen from the soil and a yellowing of the leaves and poor growth may result. So if you are using
