'Ring of Fear' Features Great Circus Acts

When "Ring of Fear" opens here, movie fans will have the opportunity to see some of the world's most famous circus acts, according to advance reports on the Cinemascope circus thriller.

Directed by Wayne - Fellows for Warner Bros., "Ring of Fear" was made in Phoenix, Arizona, at the winter headquarters of Clyde Beatty's circus. Beatty, who stars in the film with Mickey Spillane and Pat O'Brien, gathered some of the greatest names in circuses under his big top.

The Wallendas, who have been in the circus business for five generations, are the only group who can perform a seven person pyramid on the high wire. Their specialty is said to be a highlight of the circus-action scenes.

The Flying Zaccinis, a family of high-flying daredevils, are also seen in the center ring as they float through the air with the greatest of ease, precariously astride the flying trapeze.

Captain John Cline with his Liberty horses, Tiny Gallagher and others are also seen, but as it is in all three-ring circuses, the star of the show is always the man who walks into a cage full of wild beasts.

"In 'Ring of Fear' it is Clyde Beatty, playing a true-to-life role, who carries the whip and the chair. Fans are promised a closer-than-ever view of Beatty in action as the Cinemascope cameras were operated from within the steel bars of the big cat's cage by a newly-perfected remote control system.

Mickey Spillane, whose fame was found in "Ring of Fear" in the role of a hard-hitting mystery novelist, himself. But he steps out of character for one brief scene in which he performs with a troupe of acrobats on the high bouncing trampoline.

Couple Search for Pharaoh's Tomb

Robert Taylor, American archeologist aiding Eleanor Parker in the search for the tomb of an ancient Pharaoh, examines a gold statuette which Miss Parker believes to be a clue to the whereabouts of the tomb. The scene is from "Valley of the Kings," M-G-M's adventure-romance in color, filmed on location in Egypt at the exact sites of two recent discoveries that have excited world-wide attention. Carlos Thompson co-stars in the new offering, directed by Robert Pirosh.

New Fast-Drying Dry-Wall Plaster Is Now Available

Plastered dry walls are one of the newest and smoothest developments in modern building technique. Heretofore you took your choice between plaster and dry walls. Now you can have both the speed and economy of dry wall construction and a coat of quick-drying (paint-it-the-next-day) plaster, thanks to an invention by Vito Busatti.

This new material is a white mortar dry-mix preparation which can be applied as thin as 1/32nd of an inch over gypsum wallboard.

plasterboard, rocklath, concrete, cinder block, brick clay, abdo, iron and steel.

If this material is all that it is cracked up to be, it will be a welcome addition to the shopping list of the do-it-yourself handyman, who wants to finish his basement, add rooms in the attic or obliterate seams and nail dimples in dry wall panels.

The inventor recently won approval of his new plaster from the New York Board of Standards and Appeals. That approval made it legal to use the stuff in skyscrapers. Joseph Platzker, former commissioner of housing and buildings for New York City, called it to our attention.

"It can be troweled to a marble-smooth finish even by the most inexperienced hand," said Platzker. "It dries rock-hard without cracking, chipping or peeling, and it can be wallpapered or painted in a matter of hours with no special sealing or priming coats."

He pointed out that home builders, using gypsum wallboard and a single coat of the new plaster, are saving the tedious and costly problem of taping, filling and sanding joints, as well as the prime coat of sealer needed on the porous paper surface of wallboard.

"In labor time," he added, "it takes two mechanics and a helper only two days to completely plaster the average 5-room drywall home with this material. The next day the painters can move in."

A companion joint filler, developed by the same inventor, eliminates the taping and filling of joints in dry wall construction when you don't want to plaster. This filler also can be used as a tile cement for bathroom fixtures,

Expert Gives Mildew Hints

It's about this time every year that homemakers throughout North Carolina are plagued with mildew. Mildew, however, isn't selective about where it grows. It may show up on your best pair of shoes, your leather gloves, in your bookshelves, or it may even spread across the walls of your house.

According to Pauline E. Gordon, State College Extension specialist in housing and house furnishings, mildew may form on the walls of a house in damp, humid areas where there is an absence of sunshine, food in the form of oils in paint films, and the presence of mildew spores. Adding a fresh coat of paint over a mildew wall is no way to combat the problem. Instead, the brush will just spread the spores so that the mildew may return more vigorous than ever.

Miss Gordon explains that mildew is a fungus which lives on vegetable matter like paint oils. It can eat through several coats of paint.

To get rid of mildew, wash your walls with a solution of one pound of trisodium phosphate to one gallon of water. Then rinse the walls with clear water. Trisodium phosphate may be bought at a drug store.

Miss Gordon adds that special mildew-resistant paints are available. A poison can be added to paint, but it should be used with great caution. Some products of this type are available which are non-toxic to humans or to animals. The point to bear in mind if your walls are mildewed is to wash the walls with a solution to kill the spores before you add fresh paint.

for cracks around bathtubs and as a wood filler. It is rated to resist a surface pull up to 162 pounds per square inch.

Both the new plaster and the filler are given high moisture resistances. While the plaster is not waterproof, its inventor claims that dampness does not affect its strength. This makes it possible to use it directly on basement walls without the use of furring strips, lath, panels, or other surface preparation. It can take the place of masonry paint whether the foundation is stone, poured concrete, cinder block or brick.

"The cost of a cellar application," Platzker observed, "would be somewhat higher than painting with a cement paint, but a good deal lower than erecting wall panels, furring strips, lath and vapor barriers."
