NECK PAINS

By DR. R. O. BARNUM Morehead City, N. C.

Did you ever wake up with a pain in your neck? More than likely that means you have a subluxation (misplacement) of a vertebrae in the neck. Other symptoms will follow because the spinal cord is involved and all the nerves in the body are a part of this spinal cord in this area, some of which are undoubtedly impinged.

A subluxation (misplacement) at the base of the skull causes not only headaches and neckaches, but indigestion, constipation, and other disorders, because the nerve supplying all organs are part of the spinal cord.

Adjustment of the subluxation is the only logical way to correct the cause of disease.

Selection of Reliable Range Dealer is Important

By DOROTHY GRAHAM

Before you buy a major appliance like your range, it is wise to select a reliable dealer handling the products of a well-established manufacturer who will stand behind his product. Your dealer should be able to give you estimates of installation costs and service repairs and install equipment promptly and efficiently.

Study the warranty, the manufacturer guaranty that an appliance meets certain terms. If anything goes wrong with the appliance you will be in position to establish your claim under the terms of the warranty. A warning to you is that this warranty may be forfeited when you buy from anyone other than an authorized dealer.

Whether you select a low price range or a deluxe model the quality of materials, construction, and performance should be equal. The difference in price depends on the size, capacity and special features.

Select a range that has a porcelain outside finish which is acid resistant. Look for the top and back splash to be in one piece with rounded corners for easy cleaning.

You want to select a range with switches or push buttons made of metal or heat-resistant plastic located in a safe and convenient place.

You will find either seven or five multiple speeds and degrees of heat in the switches. Always have the automatic oven control checked after installation.

In the oven look for a one-piece lining made of dark porcelain for easy cleaning and for a door that closes tightly to prevent loss of heat with lock-stop to hold it open. You need an oven vent to carry off volatile products. Also look for six to eight oven self-supports to vary the position of rust resistant racks.

Ask about the insulation. To retain heat adequately it should cover all sides of the oven. It should also be a type that won't sag, shift, or settle.

The heating units of your oven are located in the top for broiling and the bottom for baking. These are either the open coil type or the tubular type.

Select the range with surface units that have tubular units which are easily cleaned.

After you have made your choice ask your dealer or utility company to give you a demonstration on how to operate your new range.

Wax protects window sills from rain spots, so give the sills an application of the wax at least once a month.

"I'm Selling Shelter!"

"I'm not only selling life insurance; I'm selling shelter, shelter to keep the rain and wind and sun and snow off the heads of people. I'm selling homes where otherwise there would be hovels, comfort where otherwise there would be misery. If you don't believe it, go to women who have known the heartbreak of being left behind, old folks who know what it means to be able to call the roof over their heads their own; go to holders of mortgages and ask them where widows get the money to clear their homes. All these people will tell you that I sell shelter."
