WITH the 4-H'ERS
by
MARTHA BARNETT Home Agent
ALVIN C. NEWSOME Ass't. County Agent

Now is the time to complete your 4-H Project for 1954. All Project Record Books are due in the home agent and assistant county agent's office in September. These should be completed before the first 4-H meeting of the school year. Winning long-time records are due in Raleigh Oct. 1.

4-H members under 14 years of age should keep a scrap book of records, news articles, honors and information about their 4-H work. This may be used later as a basis for a long-time record. Foods, clothing achievement, home beautification, grooming, health, home management, frozen foods, food conservation and room improvement are among the records due in September.

Requirements for these are given in the 4-H Girls Homemaking Record Book. Now is the time to complete record books.

During the week of Aug. 23 the annual 4-H Wildlife Camp will be held at Camp Millstone near Rockingham. This camp is sponsored by the Federal Cartridge Co., the Wildlife Resources Commission and the State 4-H organization. Nearly 100 boys and girls from all over North Carolina will be present to learn the latest in outdoor fun and living. Carteret County is entitled to send one member that has done a good job in his 4-H wildlife project. The camp is free to the member selected except for transportation to and from camp.

At this Wildlife Camp the members will participate in a series of classes and study such things as forestry, fish, game management, law enforcement, nature study, furs and trapping, Wildlife photography and marksmanship. Also there will be time for plenty of recreation.

The third annual Coastal Carolina Junior Dairy Show for 4-H members will be held in New Bern Sept. 15 and 16. All 4-H members with 4-H Dairy Calf Projects are invited to prepare their calves for this show. Last year 16 calves were shown by Carteret 4-H'ers and several brought home blue ribbons and cash prizes.

The Danish System of Judging will be used. Calves winning blue ribbons will be awarded $10 in cash, red ribbon $8, and white ribbon $8. So everyone exhibiting a calf will be guaranteed a prize. Also the Wilmington Junior Dairy Show will be held Sept. 17. A banquet will be held the night before the show for all the exhibitors and their parents.

velopment of a great port. Knowing that a railroad was in prospect of being built from Goldsboro eastward, he purchased the present site of Morehead City.

It is said that by political maneuvers he got the road to cross his real estate holdings, right down the middle of the principal street, with the terminus at today's port terminal. Morehead City today thanks the former governor but wishes he had run the tracks off to one side of the town.

The Civil War put a crimp in the growth of the town and port. Federal forces made good use of the latter during the three years they were in the county. It took the town 50 years or more to recover that setback. In the early days of the town the commercial fishing industry furnished the livelihood for most of the inhabitants, either as catchers or shippers of the various products of the sea.

Later came the menhaden industry, catching and processing of a non-eatable shad that is converted into oil and fertilizer. Recent years have brought varied industries, which in connection with the port terminal, give substantial commercial demand for labor.

Out in the Crab Point section along the Newport River is a fine nine-hole golf course, soon to be enlarged to eighteen holes, along with a modern club house. It is open to non-members at a nominal charge.

Private boating interests have the advantage of a fine yacht basin for year round tie-up of their crafts along with a repair and building yard operated by the Morehead City Yacht Basin.

A boat club known as "Tar Heels Afloat" holds a cruise on Memorial Day each year along some of the numerous sounds and rivers of Eastern Carolina.

The eastern end of town is given over to commercial enterprises such as a roofing plant, felt plant, asphalt storage, Esso products storage and the port terminal. Should you be passing when a large steamer is in port, either loading or unloading, it is an interesting sight watching the work. A request at the port office will grant you permission at such times, except when the Marines are either leaving or returning from maneuvers.

Take your time as you cross the first bridge toward Beaufort. Get a good look at the fine harbor. The draw in this bridge serves the inland waterway route coming in from Neuse River through Adams and Coe Creek canals.

Tuesday; Beaufort.
