Member of Romanian Royal Family Substitutes Nurse's Cap for Crown

By MARY PRIM
Newton, Mass. (AP) — Pretty Sandi Habsburg wears her nurse's cap as proudly as her grandmother, Queen Marie of Romania, wore a crown.

The 18-year-old honey blonde daughter of Princess Ileana of Romania and Archduke Anton of Austria was "capped" recently at New England Baptist Hospital's Nursing School.

Her mother was the principal speaker at the ceremony which marks the end of the student's six-months probationary period. So the hospital invited her to "cap" her daughter. The vivacious brunette princess says:

"I was so pleased. I was an arthritis patient at the hospital for three months. Sandi couldn't have picked a better place to train."

Sandi, born archduchess Alexandra of Austria, reports the nursing course much tougher than Vassar, where she studied for a year, but she says she enjoys every minute of it.

She prefers to be called Miss Habsburg — or any reasonable variation. She says:

"Some of the girls call me Happy Bug. And a friend of my older brother makes it Sandirella."

"When patients hear about my title, their attitude always changes. They become very polite, distant or embarrassed."

She much prefers the reaction of a plumber she met up with while at work in the hospital recently, who said:

"Hi, Habsburg! I hear you're a duchess or something."

Sandi hasn't decided which aspect of nursing appeals to her most. Surgery interests her; so does child care. She majored in child psychology at college.

Her first nursing experience came when she worked in her mother's hospital in Romania when she was 12.

Princess Ileana did nursing and even surgery during the war years. She is dedicating her new book, "The Hospital of the Queen's Heart," to Sandi. It was scheduled to come out in May.

The military hospital she built in memory of her mother has been taken over by the Communists along with the rest of her homeland. Princess Ileana says:

"The book has a background of Communism as I saw it through the hospital wards."

Fan mail from readers of her first book, "I Live Again," published in 1952, still comes to the sandi Habsburg rambling frame house in Newton, a Boston suburb, where she lives with her six children.

She recently has flown about the country to give lectures — 90 so far, she reckons. Her main idea is to bring home to this country what the Communists are up to. She says:

"The United States doesn't realize that Communism is a battle for people's minds and souls."

The Princess still finds time for the lively sketches she used as chapter headings in her first book. She also designed and painted a window in the little basement chapel at her home.

The children's interests are as varied as their mother's. Stefan, 21, is studying mechanical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Maria-Ileana, 20, called Minola, now visiting in England, has been studying art here. Dominic (Niki), going on 16, is at Preparatory school. Maria Magdalena, 14, known generally as Magi, is keen on architecture and wants to go to M.I.T.

Her sister Elizabeth (Herzi), 11, who attends Notre Dame de Sion boarding school in Kansas City with Magi, has made up her mind to be a nurse or doctor. The Princess says:

"That's the wonderful thing about a big family. They're all so different."

Transparent Tape Helps Sewers do Neater Job

By DOROTHY ROE

Associated Press Women's Editor
Does your sewing basket have a neat personality? Or do you get lost in a snarl of loose ends of thread and binding every time you try to locate your sewing tools?

Local sewing center experts have come up with a series of smart suggestions on how to use transparent tape to tidy up your sewing kit, and to achieve some ingenious shortcuts in sewing as well.

1. Wrap a strip of tape around your left - over scraps to keep them in order. It's a good idea to indicate approximate yardage on a slip of paper under the tape.
 2. Mend a torn paper pattern with tape, and use it for pattern adjustments instead of pins.
 3. Keep an orderly sewing basket by taping loose ends of binding, rick-rack or braid to the card.
 4. Here's a tip for quick seaming. Fold transparent tape around the material every few inches. It's quicker and easier than basting. If you have trouble stitching a narrow seam, mark the line with tape and use the edges as your guide.
 5. When sewing nylon, the needle frequently drops down too far in the throatplate hole and puckers the nylon. Remedy: Make a small square of brown wrapping paper to fit over the throatplate hole, and tape it to your machine. Your needle will just puncture the paper and offer less resistance to the fabric.
 6. Transparent tape is indispensable in sewing on plastics. Pinning and basting leave holes which may rip, but transparent tape holds the fabric in place. The needle sews right through it, and it may be ripped off easily.
 7. To eliminate the jumble of a button box, try sandwiching odd buttons between strips of transparent tape. The entire length may be seen at a glance, and the buttons are snapped off as needed.
 8. Rick-rack and other narrow trims go on straight when they are taped in place. Stitch over the tape and rip it off.
 9. When making bound button-holes, tape the facing to the button-hole area. Tape appliques and pockets in place, too, to prevent slipping.
- You will be able to devise many other ways of using transparent tape in your sewing basket, and you'll soon wonder how you ever sewed without it.

Use transparent tape to tie up sewing scraps, seal loose ends of thread and binding.

Veteran Showman Still Responds to Applause

Bloomfield, N. J. (AP) — In the 20's Will Oakland was a famous singer, a millionaire and the darling of society. Today, at 71, Oakland lives alone in a boarding house on an old age pension and a veteran's allowance. He lost his fortune in the depression.

"The world doesn't owe me a thing," the veteran showman says. "I've got my health, my memories, what else could a man ask at my age?"

After appearances on several recent TV shows Oakland said: "I tell you, when I heard that applause again a chill went up and down my spine."

The 136-day eruption of Kilauea volcano in 1952 was the longest eruption in recorded history says the National Geographic Society.
