

U. S. Armstrong Is Proud Of His 'USA' Initials

Baker, Ill. (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Armstrong are among the few in the nation with the initials of U.S.A. Armstrong, 85, says: "My father was Don Armstrong and he was a great admirer of Gen. U. S. Grant. But while I have the same first name as the general and late president—Ulysses—my middle name is not Simpson, as his was. It is Stinson, so the full name is Ulysses Stinson Armstrong."

This is the second in the series of articles on children's problems from the National Kindergarten Association. "I don't remember seeing all these 'comic books,' as they call them, when you were growing up, Richard?"
Mrs. Hardin, a trim, brown-haired woman, was visiting her married son and his wife, Virginia. "What do you think about them, Virginia?" she asked.
"Well, I don't know," her daughter-in-law returned vaguely. I just know all the boys and girls are carry about them. It seems as though almost any time I go into a drugstore, several youngsters are sitting on the floor by the magazine rack, reading them."
Mrs. Hardin turned to her son. "What do you think about them, Richard?"
Richard grinned at his mother. "What are you getting at now, Mom? Some bee in your bonnet, I know. Well, two or three times I've picked one up and read through two or three pages, but they bored me. For the life of me, I don't understand what's so fascinating about them to the youngsters."
"Perhaps you would if you really set yourself to find out," observed his mother. "Richard, I don't know that I ever told you, but when I

Thousands of Unnoticed Stars Make Debut in Paris

Paris (AP)—Thousands of new stars made their movie debut recently but they will never go to Hollywood.
The film was made at the Paris observatory through a powerful telescope beamed on the center of the milky way.
Andre Danjon, director of the observatory, said the stars had never been noticed before.

scribing some of the dangerous stuff that's in many of them. You wouldn't let Richie eat infected food. Then don't let him read these poisonous things. One article I read was by a famous woman columnist. She said many of the comics depict violence, crime and sexuality in the lowest, most brutal form. Those are her exact words. They're evilly exciting, and she said that, almost without exception, they are the principal matter of juvenile delinquents."
Richard was not smiling now, any more than his mother, and Virginia looked deeply concerned. "I didn't dream there was anything like that in them," she said. "I thought they were just funny — like Mutt and Jeff used to be when I was little."

"There are just funny ones," said Mrs. Hardin, "and some that are educational. But they're mixed up with the ones that depict horror, and a child doesn't discriminate. It's the parents' responsibility to do that."
"You've convinced me, Mom," said her son soberly. "I'm going to investigate them for myself."
"We'll do it together," said Virginia, "and I'm going to talk to the mothers of the boys and girls with whom Richie plays. Why, maybe we can get the stores to stop carrying the poison comics!"

"That's what some towns in Connecticut did," said Mrs. Hardin. "If one town can do it, another can. And remember, don't go against all comic books, because some are all right."
"Yes, we shall have to be specific," said Richard. "You can trust me, Mom. Virginia and I will go over them carefully and we'll note down the writers and publishers of the harmful ones, and we'll spread the word to other parents. I imagine many of them will be just as surprised and shocked as we are."
