Welfare Head Comments on 1954 Preventive, Rehabilitation Work

upon protective, preventive, and rehabilitative service through public welfare was among the noteworthy aspects of the year in public welfare as seen by Dr. Ellen Winston, commissioner of the State Board of Public Welfare.

L. "The public welfare program not only helps meet human need." Dr. Winston said, "but at the same time it strengthens the State's economy and prevents greater problems which in the long run are more expensive to the State in terms of the high costs of hospitalization and institutional care."

Nearly 50,000 cases involving more than 167,000 persons were given non-financial services only during the fisical year ending in 1954, according to the year's report. No direct financial assistance was given to these persons but they

The public assistance program of the state showed little basic change when compared with the record house. 1504 Shackleford St. Call of a year ago. Some increases not ed were directly attributable to the sharply rising population in November, providing an average of only $16.19 per child. This represented only 70 to 80 per cent of minimum need. The maximum grant possible under this program is $30 for the one adult and the The public assistance program of

Funds Matched
The matching formula which has been in effect this past year brings over $700,000 of federal funds to the State for every $100,000 of state funds appropriated for public assistance grants. These funds, to-gether with the county funds made available for welfare services, com-bine to strengthen the state's economy and at the same time help to that extent to meet the human that extent to meet the human needs of the State's citizens. On the other hand, because of limited state appropriations, much severe need cannot be met and available federal funds thus become unobtainable.

More than twice as many specialized services are given to cases which do not receive financial assistance as are given to the public assistance cases, according to the report. Many of these non-financial services are given by county wel-fare departments under state law for various other State depart-ments which do not maintain county units. Nearly 15 per cent of the time of welfare depart-ments is used to render such service for other State departments

Similar casework services were given as a part of the administration of the various financial as sistance programs, including the jointly financed public assistance program and the financial assist tance given wholly from county funds to many other cases.

In Octorber, for example, more than 11,000 non-financial specialized services were given to recipients of financial assistance. This con-stitutes about one-third of the total number on non-financial services rendered during that month.

Illustrative of the specialized services rendered are the following: adult parole supervision, in vestigation of prisoners, family ad justment services, educational and training services, vocational reha bilitation services, adult mental problem services, medical and ealth care services, services to individual children, services to adoptive home, services to the aged, referral to other agencies,

On Dec. 1 a total of 1,404 adoption proceedings were pending with the State Board of Public Welfare which registers all adoptions. This represents an increas of 200 proceedings over the record of two years ago.

Cooperation with civic clubs and other agencies and organizations has resulted in many activities
