is 350 feet wide at one end and T-shaped at the other. Because this was deemed inappropriate for construction of a school plant, Mr. Joslyn attempted to obtain adjoining property owned by the Banks estate. He said, however, that the price wanted was beyond the abil-. ity of the county to pay.

Proposal Considered

G. Bell, Morehead City, county legislator, Mr. Bell was a dinner The Morehead City School Board considered the rifle range proper-ty, but after study, decided that the Barbour property, purchased for a future high school, was the more desirable site.

Col. R. S. Marr, executive direc-tor of the North Carolina State Ports Authority, wrote Mr. Joslyn this month relative to the educa-tion board's interest in the property. Mr. Joslyn, meanwhile, had informed the federal government that the school system had given up the idea of acquiring it.

Mr. Joslyn said that if money were available, it would be nice for the education board to ac-quire the property for future use, but at present, such is not feasible. He remarked that in 1952 the board of education had made an effort to buy the rifle range prop-erty but at that time it was not available
