Change in Diet Brings New Trend in Foods

It's a well-known fact that a change in diet and eating habits over the past several years has brought about new trends in food.

According to Ruby P. Uzzle and George Abshier, Agricultural Extension Service consumer marketing specialists, "higher incomes, improved marketing 'know how', more wives working away from home, lack of domestic help and more time spent away from home by the family have made these changes necessary."

Just what are some of the new food habits that have shown up in recent years? Reports from Mr. Abshier and Mrs. Uzzle show that today we have a year-round supply of fresh vegetables and fruits—something that hasn't always been true. Our consumption of starches such as potatoes, cereals and flour breads has decreased, being replaced by fresh fruits and vegetables.

The new year that lies ahead will reveal other new trends. New foods will come into focus. Several new products have been developed recently which are or soon will be available on the market.

Besides the many new products, shoppers will find many foods in new types of packages as well as in different forms, designed to save time while shopping, for convenience to shoppers, to make meal preparation easier and to give price economy when buying.

Perhaps the biggest noticeable trend in foods during the last few years, say the specialists, has been the increasing cost of food we buy. Actually the cost of the food itself has risen little, if any, during the last five years. What has increased is the cost of the services we get when buying food. This is the main reason why retail prices of many foods rise while farm prices fall.

"Keep in mind, however," explains Mr. Abshier, "that although food prices have been going up due to increased services, food is still a bargain."

Young Folks Miss Much When They Skip Newspapers

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"I saw Sputnik way up in the sky," bragged a little fellow to his high school baby sitter, a while back.

Do you think she understood that kind of baby talk? Perish the thought. She'd never heard of earth satellites, it turned out, and perhaps doesn't now know that the United States has tossed four of its own into orbit.

How many teen-agers live in that little vacuum, passing through this wondrous age without curiosity or awareness? And why hasn't their interest been aroused by parents or teachers?

Time was when the newspaper was required reading for high school students, considered essential to keeping up with current events. But maybe Susie, like Johnny, can't read.

Read Your Newspaper
The American newspaper is the most rewarding investment that one can make at a price that doesn't even pay for the newsprint. Just test it. Go through the paper from start to finish, and see for yourself.

A newspaper offers diaries of events that history may never record in such detail. These accounts of our times are painless ways to absorb knowledge, step by step, on the educational ladder.

What's in a newspaper anyway?
There is news—everything you want to know that has happened since the last edition.

The daily newspaper is pure gold for today's science student, acquainting him with the strides being made in the vast scientific world. Book reviews stimulate a literary bent.

Theatre reviews dissect drama, opera, the stage. And where, I ask you, but in the newspaper can you find a vocabulary builder like the challenging crossword puzzle?

Best Bargain
There are news feature stories to offer a forward look into the world of other people—the way they live, sleep, eat, dress, their work and hobbies. We get the latest word from the world of sports, brush with the business world.

A student of economics can learn a great deal about debentures and deficits from financial pages. And then there are the editorials, helping to analyze the news and the paper's interpretation of it.

You don't have to agree with the writer, but it's stimulating to see the other fellow's point of view.

Newspapers haven't lost their sense of humor through the years either. You can find cartoons, humorous items, and comics strips to give you a laugh.

Reporters over the world write first hand accounts of their news experiences, sometimes gathered at great personal risk. It's for you to read today, why wait until you are a college senior to read the digested version?

The newspaper keeps us informed, too, of what is happening in government and community. Our syndicated news services also keep radio and tv updated with news and they may pick up the slack until newspaper edition time.

From weather forecast to want ads, the newspaper spells service to the citizen. It is such a time honored institution that perhaps it is taken for granted, especially by young people.

Ex-Farm Boy Raises Five Crows at Home

Elizabeth, N. J. (AP)—John Schnellbacher has something to brag about—crows. He's raising five of them in his house.

John, 31, a former New Paltz, N. Y., farm boy, found the birds after mama bird had deserted them. He's been feeding them on milk, bread, hard boiled eggs and chopped meat.

This Modern World

Santo Domingo Pueblo, N. M. (AP)—This northern New Mexico Indian Pueblo where, until recent times smoke signals were the vogue, recently was the scene of ceremonies by the Mountain States Telephone Co., marking the installation of the two-millionth telephone in the Rocky Mountain region. It was placed in the home of the pueblo governor.

Shown here is the boat house on the sound side of the Coral Bay Club property. The house was not anchored to the ground and the wind caught under it and turned it on its side.

$600,000 Spent to Better A&EC Road to Morehead

Completion of $600,000 in roadway improvements on the Atlantic and East Carolina Railway line, have been announced by W. C. Radford, general manager and Albert R. Bell, inspector-engineer for the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Co.

The $600,000 improvement spent by the wholly owned subsidiary of the Southern Railroad, represents approximately one-third of the $1,800,000 capitalization of the firm, which was taken over by Southern earlier this year.

The roadbed has been practically rebuilt. The scope of the work done was not normal maintenance, but amounted to virtually reconstruction of the entire main line.

Shoulders of the roadbed have been completely cleared of vegetation and underbrush. The side slopes have been flattened and reshaped to provide better drainage and greater stability.

Ditches have been reworked in such a manner as to provide a swale which can be maintained with mowers. Embankments to the trestle abutments have been built up with additional material, greatly strengthening trestle approaches.

The main line, 94.25 miles in length, which runs from Goldsboro to Morehead City, has been completely rebalanced with coarse sand.

The entire job was done with mechanized equipment in order to obtain more uniform quality. It takes from 1,500 to 2,200 tons of ballast for each mile of track.

In the matter of crossed ties, there have been 42,000 cross-ties cross ties replaced. The majority was cross-ties. A cross-tie has five times the anticipated life of an oak tie.

In addition, tie plates were installed on all replaced ties. The tie plate is a metal bearing plate which uniformly distributes the rail load on the ties, thus adding materially to the life of the tie, and the stability of the rail.
