New Industry in CP&L Area Creates $27 Million Payroll

Fleet

Outside the Beaufort harbor a high sea had been running for several days preventing the squadron from getting underway. In his letter Porter says: "The weather is frightful—our ships are riding it out outside—the sea seen from here is making a clean breach over them."

"It is all very fine for us in here, but it would be useless for us to go outside and ride it out with them, when we have such a snug harbor. I rode out one gale with them, anchored at sea, to show them how it could be done, but the old Malvern cut so many eccentric capers, that the eyes of the whole fleet were riveted on her, to see what she would do next. She turned us all inside out. We have filled up with coal, ammunition and provisions, and are ready to go as soon as the troops arrive or the weather permits."

Four days from departure of the squadron from its base at Cape Lookout, the vessels were anchored off Fort Fisher preparing for the opening assault which started with a heavy bombardment early on the morning of Jan. 13, 1865.

By 2 o'clock that afternoon 8,000 troops had effected a landing. On the evening of the 14th, Admiral Porter put 2,000 sailors and Marines ashore.

At 3 o'clock on the morning of Jan. 15, the assault began again, being made under the most terrific bombardment. The devastation wrought by the bombardment, and the veritable shambles caused among the defenders, is said to literally baffle description.

Surrender was inevitable. The "life-line of the Confederacy" was cut. The fall of the Southern Confederacy was imminent, inevitable.

Condition Better

Charles Lionel King, 13, of Raleigh, who was accidentally shot Friday at Merrimon while the woods with his father, was reported in better condition at the Morehead City Hospital yesterday. His condition was critical for several days after an operation that removed shotgun pellets from his body.

Industries announced plans during the past year to create 6,000 new jobs and $27,361,340 in new payroll for communities served by Carolina Power & Light Co.

Dan E. Stewart, manager of CP&L's area development department, reported this week that industries announced expenditures of $66,803,000 for new and expanded plants in 1958—the second highest figure in the area's history.

"This growth will have tremendous impact upon our economy," he said. "National Chamber of Commerce figures show that this number of new jobs will mean 26,876 more people, 11,169 more homes, 4,630 more school children, $53,572,000 more personal income per year, $24,516,000 more bank deposits, 9,715 more automobiles, 15,799 more workers employed, 363 more retail establishments and $36,688,000 more retail sales annually in communities where the growth occurs."

Many national names were added to the industrial roster during the year, Mr. Stewart said. Among them are Gerber, Dixie Cup, Pyramid Electric, Drueing Brothers, Ingraham, Laurens Glass, Kellogg Switthard and Supply of IT&T, Swift & Company, Shallcross Manufacturing Company, Southern Laces, Inc., and Perfect Packed Products.

Major expansions by existing industries such as B. B. Walker Shoes, Kearsfoot Company, Saco-Lowell, American Enka, Pacific Mills, Coble Dairies, McCanall Textiles, Jones Knitting, Colonial Stores, Buckeye Cellulose and Carter Fabrics are evidence of continued prosperity in the area, Mr. Stewart added.

Seventy-three new plants and 53 expansions were announced during the year.

The largest single industrial project for the CP&L service area was the announced $12 million nuclear research center to be developed by a North Carolina corporation, Industrial Testing Reactors, Inc., near Wadesboro.

"It is significant," Mr. Stewart said, "that two new plants which are the first of their kind in North Carolina chose sites in the CP&L service area. They are the Laurens Glass Works to manufacture glass containers at Henderson and Ingraham Company to manufacture electronic timing devices at Laurinburg."

Mr. Stewart cited continued growth of the poultry industry in both states. Three new processing plants, to cost an estimated $825,000, were announced in 1958. Hatcheries and feed mills to serve the industry accounted for an additional $1 million in plant expenditures.

Not included in the year's $68 million industrial growth figure is the Air Force's plan for a $40 million SAGE base at Calypso in North Carolina.

Professor Declares Arabic is Neglected

Madison, Wis. (AP)—Instruction in Arabic is offered by only 23 out of an estimated 1,800 American institutions of higher learning, a survey released here shows.

Prof. Menahem Mansoor of the University of Wisconsin Department of Hebrew and Semitic Studies conducted the survey.

He pointed out that Arabic is the tongue spoken daily by more than 65 million persons of the Middle East and the sacred language for 250 million people of the world.

The Carteret unit of the North Carolina Symphony Society will meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the civic center, Morehead City.

National Foundation Undertakes Fight Against 'Silent Epidemics'

By LENOX D. BAKER, M.D., President, State Medical Society

If you were to read in your paper today that an epidemic had broken out in the United States affecting some 11 1/2 million people, your alarm would be instant and terrifying.

Any disease involving so many people would assume the proportion of a major catastrophe.

And yet, that number of people—and more—are today affected by three categories of crippling disease, the alleviation and prevention of which are the targets of the current March of Dimes. The diseases are arthritis, birth defects and polio.

You will not read about these crippling destroyers of man in terms of epidemic, for they do not all occur in that pattern. Of the three, only poliomyelitis as an infectious disease is capable of spreading in epidemic fashion. Today, thanks in large part to the National Foundation, for the Salk vaccine, the big poliomyelitis problem is care of those paralyzed in former years.

But there are people in hospitals and at home, suffering the pain and the physical limitation of what is referred to medically as "chronic conditions," whose plight of pain and suffering is more terrible than that of the victims of epidemics.

The National Foundation, originally nally the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, is widening its activities to include other chronic conditions besides those caused by paralytic poliomyelitis. The Foundation has set its sights on finding the cause and a means of prevention for arthritis and for birth defects, as it has already found a preventive for the crippling caused by polio.

The Foundation will continue to assist poliomyelitis patients who still need care and rehabilitation, and it hopes soon to offer aid to those through age 18 who have arthritis and those with defects involving the central nervous system.

The multitude of patients involved is staggering. It is estimated that 11,000,000 persons suffer from some form of rheumatic disease, the most serious of which is rheumatoid arthritis that strikes children and young adults in the prime of life.

Records indicate that 250,000 infants are born each year with crippling congenital malformations of many kinds. There are alive today 150,000 post-polio patients who have survived the paralytic form of the disease.

The victims of these uncontrolled diseases make up the multitudinous army of disabled people for whom the 1959 March of Dimes offers help and hope. The help will come through opportunities for modern rehabilitation technique; these have been developed over the years for polio patients and are equally applicable to other crippling conditions.

The hope lies in research; from a vast program of scientific exploration in the fields of cellular biology, virology, metabolism, genetics, may come the answers to why people get arthritis or are born deformed. Once this is known, means may be found for prevention.

We have members of this group right here in our North Carolina, men, women, and children to whom the March of Dimes came in a time of need and to whom the Foundation has vital and personal meaning. More people are being added to their ranks each year.

Our hospitals are becoming more crowded with chronic disease patients, our facilities for giving the treatment they need are heavily taxed, as are such facilities everywhere in the United States.

It is good news for all that the March of Dimes has entered the field of chronic disease and the fight against the major unsolved health problems in this country today. Progress in this field can bring untold relief and restore to a productive life many millions of people who deserve your help and of whose suffering up to now we have been unaware.

State Law Prevents Sale Of Liquor in Wet County

Maynardville, Tenn. (AP)—It's against the law to sell whisky in legally wet Union County, Tennessee law permits liquor sales only in towns of 1,000 or more and this East Tennessee county doesn't have one.

The county voted to go wet in 1939, when Maynardville met the 1,000 requirement. But a population drop in the past years leaves the county's largest town 400 residents shy of the legal mark.

Because of two poor seasons in its vineyards, France is importing wines.

J. P. Harris Writes Letter About Christmas

Beaufort, N. C. Dec. 27, 1958

Christmas 1958 is now over, and we will soon usher in the New Year of 1959. During this Holiday Season I have visited in a number of this county's business firms, and in several homes in this area and from all appearances, Christmas 1958 was a success financially, and materially.

While making these observations, a thought occurred to me—each year on the 25th of December, we celebrate the birthday of Christ. Since we are celebrating His birthday, what did we give Him for a birthday present? What has happened to the "Old Fashion Christmas"? the kind that we celebrated with joy and still it contained a religious effect.

I am afraid that in the fast pace that the world is living today, we are placing the emphasis on the material giving and receiving rather than the true spirit of celebrating the birthday of our Christ. I sincerely hope that in the year 1959 and other years to come, that I, and everyone else, will give Christ His rightful place when we celebrate His birthday, Christmas.

J. P. Harris Jr.

Sears to Put Most of Retail Ads in Papers

Chicago — In 1959, Sears, Roebuck & Co. expects to spend $48,000,000 for newspaper advertising, representing 73.4 per cent of Sears' retail advertising dollar and amounting to 275,000,000 lines in about 1,000 newspapers.

The figures were revealed at a press conference here Dec. 17. Sears will invest approximately $50 million dollars in its 1959 program of expansion and improvement.

In 1945, Sears spent $15,007,000 for retail advertising. In 1958, total retail expenditures are expected to reach $68,500,000.

Newspapers have traditionally received the major share of Sears' retail ad dollar. Newspapers received $443,288,000 from 1946 through 1958.

"Those figures are living evidence of how we value the importance of newspaper advertising," said Charles B. Kellstadt, president.
