

25 Men Hear Travel School Set-Up Explained

Courses Will Be Taught in April Partyboatmen to Get Special Instruction

Twenty-five businessmen met yesterday morning at the Hotel Fort Macon to hear Harvey Rape and T. Carl Brown, Raleigh, outline plans for two schools to be conducted in Morehead City in April.

The first school, April 13 to 17, for managers and supervisors, will be taught by Mr. Rape, owner and operator of Harvey's cafeteria, Raleigh.

The second school, called the "Host School" will be April 21-23 and will be conducted for all persons who come in contact with the travelling public in this area.

A special course for partyboat fishermen, a one-day session, is scheduled for April 20.

The courses are free. The state provides advice on how the courses should be conducted, and provides the instructor for the supervisors' course. It is hoped that William Slattery, UNC, will be present to conduct the partyboat fishermen's course.

Mr. Rape instructs managers and supervisors in the training of employees. He emphasized that training is a continuous operation, adding that it is important that employers properly train their key personnel and maintain throughout their organization the proper spirit of helpfulness and cooperation.

The courses will be set up by chamber of commerce tourist and convention committee headed by Dr. Russell Outlaw. A questionnaire will be sent to chamber members, asking their preference on the times for teaching the managers' course.

Mr. Rape reports that 20 managers can be taken in one class and two classes will be conducted daily, each session being identical. The course will consist of five two-hour sessions.

The same pattern will be followed in the three-day host school. The same instruction will be offered at the afternoon session as was offered at the morning session.

Employers will pay their employees as usual during the time they are taking the course. They will also pay a $1 registration fee for each employee. That fee will be used to hire a bus to take the class members on tours of Fort Macon and Beaufort, to acquaint them with the attractions this area offers.

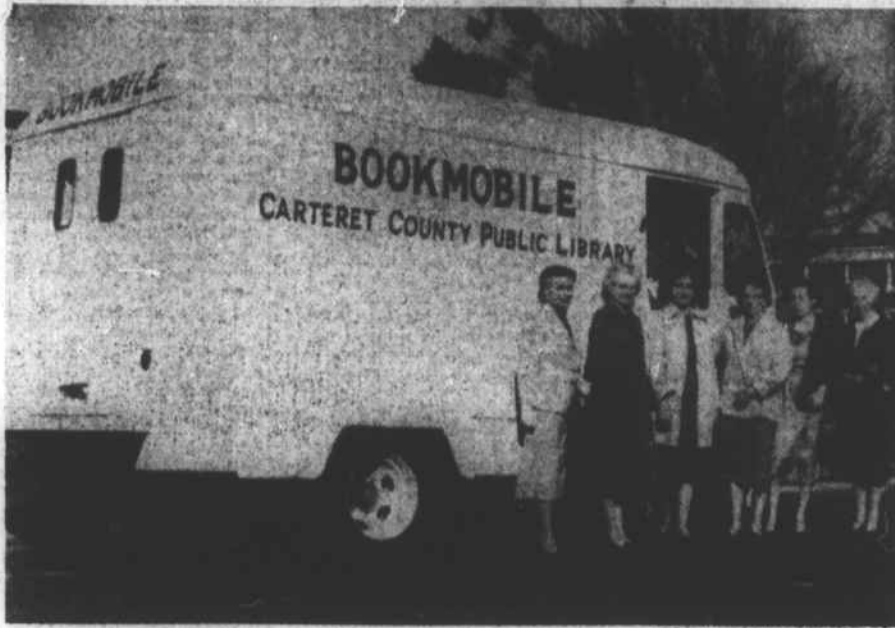

The host school will deal with the following topics: what the tourist means to you and your community, what you have to sell, what you should know about the Beaufort-Morehead and Carteret county area, and what you can do to keep tourists longer.

Mr. Brown stated that many service personnel, such as waitresses, policemen and service station attendants do not know how to give directions to a stranger. To illustrate the fact that these people should be trained, he said that two persons whom he asked did not know where the chamber of commerce office was in Morehead City.

Although an instructor is furnished for the manager's school, a staff of local persons forms the faculty for the host school. Mr. Brown said that course must be made to fit the community.

Two major trials, one murder and one rape, are scheduled for next week's criminal term of superior court.

Joe Bill Powell, Wilson Negro who posed as a deaf mute and allegedly raped Mrs. Rosemary Green, Negro woman in Morehead City Feb. 11, is docketed for trial Tuesday.

Maylan Mattingly, who is charged with the shooting and killing of her husband, Sgt. Louis Mattingly, USMC, Sept. 22 near Newport, is docketed for trial Wednesday.

Powell is in the county jail. According to police chief Herbert Griffin, Mrs. Green came to the Morehead City police station shortly before 11 a.m. Feb. 11. In an hysterical state, she told police that Powell had come to her home and made motions to the effect that he wanted a drink of water.

She went to the kitchen for the water. When she returned he was holding a gun. When she started to cry, she said he threw her across a bed and raped her. She showed police where her clothes had been torn by Powell and where he had struck her across the face.

Powell's case is scheduled to go first to the grand jury.

The November grand jury returned a true bill in the Mattingly case. Mrs. Mattingly, following an inquest soon after the shooting, was released under $6,000 bond.

According to her testimony at the inquest, she and her husband had an argument on the night of the fatal shooting. She said her husband was "drunk enough to act crazy" when she fired a 410-gauge shotgun at him.

Officers estimated that the gun had been fired at close range, probably about 4 feet. After Mrs. See COURT TERM, Page 3
