Sunday through April 11 has been set aside as National FHA celebration.

If you will read your NEWS-TIMES carefully during this period you will learn about some of the activities, some of the goals of this great organization.

Perhaps some of our readers are not acquainted with this organization and do not know the meaning of FHA. It means Future Homemakers of America. Can there be another youth organization more important than one that teaches homemaking to our youth?

The chief advisors of FHA are home economics teachers in our high schools. The Beaufort high school teacher is Mrs. David Beveridge, who felt that you would be interested in this organization and its goals.

Both boys and girls can be members. The program is optional. Each chapter follows schedules most suitable to their schools and community.

Tomorrow many of our Carteret County members and advisors will attend the State FHA convention in Raleigh.

On Sunday, we will see many FHA members attending church in groups.

On Thursday, April 23, there will be a Mother and Daughter banquet at Beaufort high school. This will be similar to the Father-Daughter covered dish supper that was held in the fall. At celebrations like these, parents are made aware of the Future Homemakers goals.

There will be radio programs on our local stations by FHA members.

Many parents with children who are too young yet to become FHA members will ask during this week, "Well, what do FHA'ers do?" The following are some of their goals:

1. Helping each family member develop as an individual, promoting family health and safety; managing household tasks smoothly and making the home attractive are just a few of the responsibilities a good homemaker must assume. Future homemakers prepare themselves for these responsibilities through such experiences as discussing problems of concern to family members, entertaining guests in the homemaking department, having chapter programs on time, energy and money management, taking surveys of safety hazards in the home, school and community and working with others to help correct these hazards.

2. Chapter programs and discussions on such topics as Learning to Make and Keep Friends and Understanding Ourselves and Others, help future homemakers develop into happy, well-adjusted people. Poise and self-confidence are developed through varied chapter experiences which include serving on committees, being a host or hostess at social events and planning and presenting programs. By working together in the chapter, FHA'ers learn the give and take of good human relationship.

3. Recognizing that the community affects the well-being of family members, Future Homemakers sponsor and participate in community service projects. Volunteer work for institutions, clean-up campaigns and assistance with fund drives are among the many community services they perform. These services are of immediate benefit to FHA'ers and others in the community, and help prepare them for community work.

4. To better understand, learn from and contribute to other nations, Future Homemakers read books, entertain foreign visitors, hear guest speakers and exchange letters with youth overseas. They make contributions to other countries directly and through other agencies which give technical and material aid.

5. Career discussions and field trips to college and university campuses are some of the experiences which Future Homemakers have that help them select the right occupation for their interests and abilities. Many FHA'ers continue to study home economics in college, realizing that it prepares them for two careers at once.

6. By having programs on the rights and privileges of citizens, being informed voters in their own chapter elections, urging adults to vote in elections and working with civic groups to learn more about their own community, Future Homemakers prepare themselves for adult citizenship responsibilities.

7. Future Homemakers plan their chapter experiences to meet the demands of their members, their families, and the community. Parents, administrators, and civic group representatives work with FHA'ers and their advisors to find ways of improving family and community living.

8. During the year, Future Homemakers continuously take time to evaluate their activities, attitudes and progress. They take stock of what they are doing and what they can do to improve. Evaluation helps them improve the quality of current work and gives them a good sound basis for further planning.

These are builders of homes for America's future, living by their creed, learning to make homes where living will be the expression of everything good and fair. Homes where truth, love, security and faith will be realities, not dreams.

Future Homemakers of America face the future with warm courage and high hope. May you always keep your morals and ideals high. We salute each of you! May God bless you and guide you as you face the new horizons in tomorrow's world.
