Also competing in the rodeo were Helmut Treschan, Beaufort; Reuben Lilly, Newport, and Edward Lawrence, Smyrna.

Kittrell made 376 1/4 points out of a possible 500. The rodeo consisted of written examination and driving tests. Both Kittrell and Miss Adams, who attends Beaufort school, will compete in the district school bus rodeo at New Bern.

Rodeo judges were H. L. Joslyn, county school superintendent; Mr. Paul, Mr. Carlton and R. H. Brown, state highway patrolman.

Court Case

said that when Mrs. Grantham came to the door her "lipstick was smeared, hair tousled looking, her zipper was not zipped and the bed was churned up."

She surmised that Mrs. Grantham was wearing a "blue woolen dress".

Officer Wilson testified that when he and the others went up to the motel door, there were no lights on in the room. He estimated that they waited 5 to 7 minutes before the door was opened.

He said, "The lady was combing her hair when the door was opened." He further testified that at top button on the back of her dress was buttoned, but the zipper below it was not zipped.

He added that it looked as though someone had been sleeping in the bed, but no one else was in the room. Then the officers went to the bathroom door and knocked.

There was no answer. When officer Jenkins asked Wilson to go to the motel office for a key, Wilson testified, he said that Mrs. Grantham asked Hall to come out of the bathroom. Hall was fully dressed, he said.

Under cross-examination, Wilson said that after their second knock, a light went on in the room. He said he couldn't tell whether the dress the woman was wearing was blue or green. Hamilton then showed the officer the top of a blue dress. He asked him to point out the zipper that he saw unzipped on the night of April 3. The dress top had no zipper. It had buttons on it.

Chief Moore was the next witness. He said that he was handed a warrant to be served and at about 1 a. m. the morning of April 4 went to the motel office to report to the motel owners that he had to serve a warrant.

The warrant, he said, was made out with the name "Emily Lee" and he didn't learn until later the woman's full name. When he knocked on the door, a woman answered, "Just a minute." He said he knocked again and announced that police were at the door.

Chief Moore said that a lady came to the door and he told her he had a warrant and asked for D. J. Hall. The officer said she replied, "You don't see him here, do you?" He said that he, officers Wilson and Jenkins went in and Jenkins tried the bathroom door. It was locked.

Moore asked the woman again if D. J. Hall was there and he said she didn't answer. When Wilson was asked to go to the motel office for a key, the chief said that Mrs. Grantham went to the bathroom door and asked Hall to come out.

The chief said he took the two of them to the police station where Hall posted bond.

Under cross-examination, chief Moore said that Mrs. Grantham "looked all right" when she came to the door. He said Hall had told him that he and Mrs. Grantham had had dinner in Swansboro that night.

He testified that Hall's reputation was good as far as he knew and that he had never seen Mrs. Grantham prior to that night.

No more witnesses were put on the stand. Hamilton informed the court that Mrs. Grantham sells ads for a radio station, often comes to the county on business and that her motel room was both business office, living room and bedroom. He commented that "rooms in the Sir Walter are used for business more than anything else." The Sir Walter is the name of a hotel upstate.

"The green-eyed monster played a part in this," Hamilton said. "She (Mrs. Hall) followed them to that room. In (Mr. Hall) had a right to be in that room, he had a right to do anything he wanted to with her (Mrs. Grantham). The state has failed to prove that they were occupying that room for immoral purposes."

Solicitor Taylor said that he doubted that Hall was locked in the bathroom from the time he and Mrs. Grantham entered the motel room.

Judge Morris observed wryly, "Maybe she locked him in the bathroom to protect her reputation."

Solicitor Taylor laughed but contended that Hall and "a beautiful young woman were not on a Sunday school picnic in a dark room in a motel at Atlantic Beach."

Judge Morris, in a rare and brief flight of romanticism quoted the Bible and poetry, and then agreed with Hamilton that the state hadn't shown that any immorality had actually been proven in state's evidence.

Hamilton became angry when the judge allowed Taylor's request for a jury trial as to Hall. "This man's been harassed enough," Hamilton declared. "The solicitor is just engaging in persecution of the defendant who has been wrongfully embarrassed. This is the most unfair thing I have ever seen!"

Hamilton and his clients left the court room. Then Hamilton returned and asked that the court allow

Wisconsin Legislature Confused on Sessions

Madison, Wis. (AP)—Secrecy in government traveled a wavering course during one recent session of the Wisconsin Legislature.

On the same afternoon, assembly committee chairmen announced that all future sessions would be opened to the public but at the same time, Assembly Democrats said their previously open caucus sessions will be closed henceforth.

Hall to appear in superior court on recognition. Hall's $400 check, which had been posted in bond for both him and Mrs. Grantham, was returned. (She is from Goldsboro).

Mrs. Hall, an attractive blonde, appeared in court in a broad-colored green summer dress with matching accessories. Mrs. Grantham, a divorcee, appeared in a pink, full-skirted cotton and pink earrings. Both she and Mr. Hall appeared calm and relaxed throughout the proceedings.
