'Round About Town

By ALICE H. TAYLOR

News this week is pretty scarce due to the long seige of rainy weather, but even at that, every cloud must have its silver lining. Since the weather has cleared, it seems the shrubs are busily putting forth new shoots, and the rye grass planted is beginning to make a lovely showing.

Those who haven't planted theirs as yet should get busy because their lawns will certainly make a poor appearance in their drab brown as compared with the vivid velvet green of rye grass lawns.

Doubtless you've read in THE NEWS-TIMES about the free soil-testing stations that have been set up in the county for two weeks. This public service is available not only to farmers but home gardeners as well. But people are funny...

What about having an "antique garden" on the site of the proposed Museum, or reserve a small portion of the courthouse grounds for this purpose? It's been noted that the older homes in New Bern bear neat plaques or shields noting the dates and ages of those homes.

They help tourists find places of greater interest, but are small enough not to detract from the overall appearance of the residence.

Just a reminder that Thursday night, Oct. 29, at 8 o'clock there'll be a gathering at the Scout Building to determine whether enough residents are interested in forming a Garden Club.

Though activity has been slow, there have been some improvements made. Mayor Piggie Potter has cleared the big lot back of his home, making it almost possible to see all the way across the block...

Fire Call Answered

First Report Cards Go Out; Betas Initiate New Members
By JOANNE ALLEN
One-sixth of the school year has already passed. Because of this, report cards have been issued for the first time.
One unusual change in the reports was the absence of conduct grades. This year conduct is based on the honor system instead of grades.
Were you and your parents proud of your first report card? If not, try exerting a little more effort next six weeks.
No, the circus had not decided to educate its clowns. It was just Beta Club Initiation Day at BHS. Funnier sights were never seen at the school.
There seemed to be an increase in the number of girls in school and a decrease in the number of boys.
Gray Simpson looked exactly like Lucille Sweeney, cigar and all. Donna Hudnall looked as if she had just returned from a Paris fashion show and had accepted a position as model for Revlon. Many thought Sheila Willis's new hair style to be very stunning. Sheron Wilkinson had rushed to finish her chores down on the farm, but she just didn't have time to change her work clothes before school.
Besides having to dress in outrageous costumes, the new Beta members were made to do such stupid stunts as dancing and singing in the lunchroom and all around school.
The final part of the initiation was held Wednesday night in George Huntley's "Cow Palace." The initiates were sent on a scavenger hunt. They faithfully returned from the hunt with such items as a barnacle, a sandfiddler, or one of coach McQuaid's ties.
Then the members were participants in a variety show. Butch Hassell stole the show with his interpretive ballet. After all this, the initiates were formal members of the Beta Club.
This week we introduce Miss home. A carport, new windows, and full upstairs with three big bedrooms, bath, and tremendous closet space has truly made this one of the prettier homes in town, and one whose yard is always kept at the peak of cleanliness and beauty.

Comments Heard in Passing:
Wouldn't a planned beautification program for the entire town of Beaufort be more beneficial than individual home-owners each acting on his own, especially with the idea of the town being at its prettiest during the Centennial next year?
In towns and cities where real old homes are a heritage of the community, most of them have "antique gardens" planned in keeping with the period of the house. Shouldn't, and couldn't, this be done in Beaufort?
What about having an "antique garden" on the site of the proposed Museum, or reserve a small portion of the courthouse grounds for this purpose? It's been noted that the older homes in New Bern bear neat plaques or shields noting the dates and ages of those homes. Would residents in Beaufort like to have the same on the showplaces and older homes in town?
They help tourists find places of greater interest, but are small enough not to detract from the overall appearance of the residence.
Just a reminder that Thursday night, Oct. 29, at 8 o'clock there'll be a gathering at the Scout Building to determine whether enough residents are interested in forming a Garden Club. When you attend this first meeting... and we hope all of you will... bring a seedling or rooting to exchange with other persons present. Make your plans now to attend.
