

Pollyanna Begins Week Run Today at Morehead

By O. J. MORROW

With the first turn of a movie camera on a hot day in California's Napa valley, the joining of two legends became a fact—the fictional legend of Pollyanna and the living legend of Walt Disney.

Walt Disney is a household word today. Pollyanna, at least to older generations, has been a recognized American institution ever since 1912 when it was first published.

Actually, the story of the fabulous success of the book is as incredible as the story of the public's acceptance of Disney as a creative genius.

Pollyanna Whittier, so the novel reads, was an orphan girl who came to a small eastern town to live with her wealthy, spinsterish, strict, unloved, and seemingly unloving aunt, Polly Harrington.

Aunt Polly runs the town of Harrington with a velvet-gloved fist. She is charitable because it is a civic duty. She maintains the name Harrington in the fashion of a benevolent despot.

Into this area of "town acceptance" of things as they are, comes Pollyanna and her "Glad Game." This is a philosophy which simply says that no matter how bad things are, they could be worse.

The effect of the book was phenomenal. A New York stock exchange broker suggested to members of the exchange that they read "Pollyanna" to their families. The inmates of a large eastern prison began playing the "Glad Game," and according to their letters to Miss Porter, it helped them hold hope for the future.

In trying to explain just what the youthful heroine believed, Miss Porter said in an interview: "Pollyanna did not pretend that everything was good. Instead she represented a cheery, courageous acceptance of the facts. She understood that unpleasant things are always with us, but she believed in mitigating them by looking for whatever good there is in what is."

The combination of Pollyanna's universal appeal and Walt Disney's genius has resulted in an outstanding motion picture, one that is already being talked of in Academy Award terms.

Starring in the Technicolor production are Jane Wyman, Richard Egan, Karl Malden, Nancy Olson, Adolphe Menjou, Donald Crisp, Agnes Moorehead and Kevin Corcoran. And, as Pollyanna, in the Buena Vista release, Disney is presenting one of the brightest new actresses to come into stardom in past two decades, 14-year-old Hayley Mills. Pollyanna starts today and plays for seven days at the Morehead theatre.

Similar Plays Ready to Open

New York (AP)—Two plays with similar titles, both having to do with the Nazi capture of Warsaw in World War II, are being readied for Broadway premieres in the fall.

One is The Wall, a dramatization by Millard Lampell of John Hersey's novel about Hitler's mass extermination of Polish Jews. Later David Seznick will produce it as a movie.

The second is Behind the Wall, a play by Alfred Marder who uses the pen name of Kenneth Green. The cast consists of one boy and four girls, ages from 8 to 14.

Do you like suspense? horror? Looking for a Rare Experience in Horror from the master of the Macabre? Then look no further. You'll find all this in the new film, produced and directed by the master of them all, Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho. This time the story involves Anthony Perkins, Vera Miles, John Gavin, Janet Leigh, and the old master himself, and if any part of the plot was printed here it would lessen the suspense, so no review is forthcoming.

A word of advice, though, see it from the beginning, and please don't reveal any of the story to your friends after you see it.

Supermarkets Join in Buying

A report from USDA says that many large independent supermarkets have organized so they are competitive with big chains.

Direct buying of fruits and vegetables from shipping points—formerly possible only for a few big chains—has become available to practically all but smaller unorganized stores.

The report predicts that the total of direct buying from shippers is not likely to go higher than 50 to 60 per cent of total volume of fresh fruits and vegetables. The rest will continue to be bought at terminal markets.

The report summarizes present practices and the rapid evolution of food retailing during the past 30 years, on the basis of interviews with officials of large and small chains.
