Commissioners to Draft Written Opinion on Problems at Hospital

After visiting the Morehead City hospital Thursday noon, Morehead City commissioners decided to meet yesterday to draft their appraisal of the hospital situation and send it to the hospital trus-

The trustees wrote a letter to the town board this month, stating that they planned to spend $19,000 in reserve funds on hospital improvements and that if this is done, other funds may be necessary to meet routine expenditures, such as salaries, and that unless the town was willing to assume the responsibility for those expenses (should the need arise) the trustees recommended closing the hospital in

Attached to the letter were recommendations from the Medical Care Commission as to changes that should be made in the building which houses the hospital. The letter pointed out that the hospital trustees were legally responsible for seeing that recommended changes are carried out.

The town board, in session Wednesday night, decided it would be unwise for the trustees to spend all their reserve fund, since the town has no money to divert to hospital

The hospital has been operating since 1959 on a temporary conditional license.

At noon Thursday (the Friday date, mentioned in an editorial in today's paper, is in error) town commissioners, Grady Rich and Douglas West, contractors, met at the hospital. Purpose of the conference was to see what could be done toward complying with Medical Care Commission requirements without a major expenditure of

Following consultation with the contractors, mayor Dill said that certain measures could be taken to correct structural defects, "but it would be foolhardy to do anything on a long-range basis."

The Medical Care commission has stated that if and when the proposed county hospital opens, the Morehead City hospital must be close ! It is estimated that a county hospital, if built, would not be ready prior to 1965.
