"WHOM THE GODS WOULD DESTROY"

(Extracts from address of Josephus Daniels at Burnsville Thursday night, October 20.)

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Am talking about Herbert Hoover, who offers the day's most striking illustration of that old truth.

And while it is comforting enough for us Democrats to see victory ahead, to see for the first time in years an opportunity for the restoration of the government to the people, to see the first glimmer of light in the economic gloom that has encompassed us since 1920, we do not enjoy the spectacle of the President of the United States reduced to Mr. Hoover's sad plight, deflated, de-banked, deserted and desperate.

You remember Mr. Hoover was going to tend to the business of being President, leaving to his lieutenants the task of perpetrating the Hoover myth through another campaign. He was going to make a few dignified utterances but would do no personal campaigning. Then he was prodded by the despairing faithful to go out to Iowa where the straw ballot of the Des Moines Register, his stout mid-west supporter, revealed wholesale desertions from the Republican standard. He spoke in Des Moines before a hand-picked assembly, to which admission was secured by card only.

What he learned in Iowa must have been the last straw. It was after that Des Moines address that Mr. Hoover abandoned argument and reason, and resorted to the final recourse of desperation—the short and ugly word. Mr. Hoover pictured himself as the victim of Democratic lies, the martyr of "deliberate, intolerable falsehoods."

In that statement, and in like statements since, Mr. Hoover offered the sure evidence of an irritation that has always characterized him when the integrity of his role as "miracle man" has been questioned. It was observed noticeably with the publication of the Literary Digest's first figures showing the handwriting on the wall. It increased when Senator Norris belittled him a reactionary and made the label stick. It was heightened when Hiram Johnson repudiated his candidacy, thereby forestalling Hoover's loss of his own adopted state of California. It reached the climax when Carter Glass and Garner and others tore the fabric of his campaign to shreds and revealed that he was hopelessly wrong in his most important statements.

The candidate who shows temper usually exposes his weakness. Keeping cool with Coolidge was a winning slogan. "Keeping hot with Herbert Hoover" is an impossible demand.

His denunciation of his opponent in his Cleveland speech was as unbecoming to Hoover as it was unjust to Roosevelt. It was intended to put pep in a dispirited army. Teddy Roosevelt was a master of the trick of stirring up his supporters. Taft tried it feebly. Mr. Hoover is amateurish, pathetic and futile.

The latest speech was heralded by his closest partisans as a "fighting speech." Battering would have been a better word. Mr. Hoover was driven into a corner. There was no refuge from public repudiation. Bright promises of his first campaign had been blighted by the cold fact of no performance. His calm, superior assurance of "prosperity around the corner" was obliterated when the turning revealed disaster instead. His later alibi that the depression was born in Europe and its effect on the United States was inevitable put him, therefore, in the ridiculous dilemma of a futile excuse or a confession of supine indifference. Before the failure of his leadership in measures for relief, once the depression could not be camouflaged as a psychological nightmare, in the face of his stubborn opposition to all Democratic measures for relief, his latest complaint of Democratic interference with his program was ludicrous.

Mr. Hoover has been driven around the circle and back into his corner. His only recourse is an appeal as he contemplates the certainty of defeat. He cannot stir a fighting spirit within his party because he has no fighting instincts within himself. It was smooth sailing when he was carried along by the momentum of success achieved through other men's efforts. Mr. Hoover was not wuffed by criticism when he was flattered with ease from one place of distinction to another. Now his supporters are giving away. He has no Wilson to stand behind him. He has no longer behind him a powerful and relentless machine held together by what some one has called "the cohesive power of public plunder," as he had under Harding. He hasn't the support of a Calvin Coolidge, who needed the dignity of the "Miracle Man" to save the face of a wrecked Cabinet. He hasn't any longer the support of powerful moral groups as well as liberal and progressive Republicans now completely disillusioned in their misplaced faith.

In this situation the poverty of his own powers is apparent. He hasn't the qualities that made Teddy Roosevelt and Wilson welcome a fight. "I am fighting with my back to the wall," said the beloved Taft, who had no conception of the weapon to be used in a combat with the aggressive Roosevelt.

Now another Roosevelt, who won his first steps in politics by a fight against boss rule in his party, has pushed Hoover to the edge of the precipice. A suffering people demands leadership. Mr. Hoover has only hard words and bitter complaints.

Agricultural News Notes

By S. J. Kirby.

That standardization by varieties of crops and breeds of livestock and poultry is a help to the community is becoming more and more recognized by leaders. A report from the Atlanta market received during the past week shows that potatoes of the Green Mountain variety are selling there at sixteen cents a bushel more than other round white varieties. A report on poultry shows that on the New York market Plymouth Rocks are selling at two cents a pound higher than is given for those of other breeds.

Much progress has been made here toward standardization in the one big cash crop, potatoes. More than two hundred bushels of certified seed of this variety, planted here this year, according to the best estimates will yield at least fifteen bushels for one planted. By another year a large part of the crop grown should be of the Green Mountain variety.

This variety not only brings the top price but according to many of the growers outyields other good varieties under local conditions.

THE RAT-KILLING CAMPAIGN
The campaign to be put on in Spruce Pine under the direction of C. S. Roland, Control leader, Mr. L. C. Cunniff, editor of the news in the business section of the town this week is receiving the hearty support and co-operation of the business men. The damage done here annually by rats is estimated to be very large. It seems that these rodents do not confine their damage to feed and food stores alone but give considerable trouble to stores and business houses that carry other lines of merchandise. At a later date this work will be carried to other towns and communities in Mitchell and Yancey counties.

Some work in the irradiation of field mice which do much damage to orchards will be put on in the Bowditch orchard near Toeogee on Friday of this week. The demonstration will start early in the afternoon and all those interested in this work are invited to attend this demonstration.

Concerted action in rodent control is important. When rats get the poison they creep away into their burrows and hiding places and die. But the very fact that a few rats in a group cause the other members in the same group to abandon the quarters at least temporarily and to seek new places. So if one man kills the rats from his premises, either all or in part, a neighbor who allows those on his premises to go unmolested may expect newcomers. Hence the value of a general campaign in rat-killing. Arrangements are being made to provide for residents in Spruce Pine to obtain the bait at a minimum cost through the Spruce Pine Drug Co. and to have a part in the campaign on Thursday and Friday of this week.

TOBACCO GROWERS ENCOURAGED
According to the reports from some of the leading tobacco growers in Mitchell and Yancey the present indications are that there will be much tobacco of very fine quality marketed from this section this year.

Several of the growers say that their tobacco is curing out as beautifully as they have seen it do at any time in the past. Will Tomberlin of Swiss says he has good tobacco as he has made. Similar reports come from Lester Briley on Jack's Creek, D. C. Bailey of Toledo, Chas. Crawford, R. Bell, Bob Doyd and others.

It is admitted that there is much tobacco of poor quality here also. Much of the poor quality has resulted both from the growers' failure to get good plants early in the spring and from poor fertilization. But that this season will have much tobacco of high quality to offer on the market this fall is a foregone conclusion. What the market will be this year is another question on which few offer any a guess. That the average price will range higher than that for last season is the hope of local growers.

METHODIST CHURCH NEWS

The Mens Bible Class of the Burnsville Methodist church had charge of 11 o'clock service. The seven utterances of Christ on the cross were given by seven of the men. A rugged cross was placed in the church and as the different words of Jesus were discussed a card with the words was placed on the cross. "The old Rugged Cross" was sung as the opening hymn. Mrs. Sorrells and Mrs. Hobbs sang "He Was Nailed to the Cross." The service was led by Mrs. Carroll Gillespie in a very efficient manner. The seven men who discussed the seven utterances of Jesus on the cross were Messrs. Fred Brummitt, Leslie Hensley, W. O. Griffith, George Green, Fred Proffitt, R. A. Charles and Chas. Young. The offering was taken by Mr. Gardner and David Boone. The church extends an invitation to this class to meet with them on the next 4th Sunday.

The Women's Bible Class met Thursday afternoon at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Henry Smith. Mrs. Robert Ray had charge of the program. A Bible contest was given. The Bible proved to be not only interesting but helpful. Every one present thoroughly enjoyed the program and felt they knew more about the Bible as a result of the contest. After a short business session the class enjoyed a social hour during which Mrs. Smith, assisted by her daughter Sarah, served delicious refreshments. The November meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Wren Hennessee.

WALLACE DAVIS GIVES UP FIGHT

Will Begin Sentence As Soon As Papers Are Ready, He Says.

Wallace B. Davis, sentenced to state's prison on two counts growing out of the Central Bank and Trust company, left Asheville late yesterday afternoon by motor for Raleigh after declaring that he would ask no further consideration from North Carolina and would begin paying his "debt to society."

It was learned, however, that Mr. Davis will hold a final conference this morning with General Albert L. Cox, Raleigh counsel for Davis and for Lake Lee, Sr., and Lake Lee, Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., convicted to serve prison sentences and pay fines for alleged conspiracy to defraud the Central Bank and Trust company. The United States supreme court yesterday declined to review the case.

With all avenues closed Mr. Davis, said yesterday that he would begin serving his five to seven year term for alleged publication of false reports as to the condition of the bank before it closed its doors. Mr. Davis also stands to serve a four to six year sentence with Luke Lee, Sr., for alleged conspiracy to defraud. The sentences are to run concurrently.—Asheville Citizen.
