RURAL AREAS URGED TO GET IN POOL MOVE

Residents of smaller towns and rural communities were urged today by James S. Burch, States War Transportation Secretary, to use their own initiative in forming share ride clubs.

Burch pointed out that the campaign to save tires on wheels was well organized in the larger towns, through local War Transportation Committees and Air Raid Wardens of the OCD, but such organizations did not exist in all smaller centers nor in rural areas.

"However," he said, "most of the State's population is still in rural areas, and it is very important that the share-ride movement be extended into these sections. I earnestly urge county farm agents, PTA groups and similar organizations to initiate local campaigns. There is nothing complicated about forming a share-ride club—it is simply the formalizing of good neighborliness, and North Carolina's rural population is composed of good neighbors."

Burch said he believed the people in the country and in small towns had a larger stake in tire conservation than did people in larger communities. "Transportation is vital to our rural communities, not only because larger distances are involved but also because few small communities have public utility facilities.

"Every reliable authority now admits no new tires are in sight for civilian cars or trucks for over two years, and it will be a wise community which now sets up workable machinery for the preservation of its wheels. They've got to last a long time. Rural residents, in addition to sharing car rides to go to market, to work, or to church, have a great opportunity to pool their trucks for farm work, the hauling of produce and delivery of needed supplies. Every truck that returns home unloaded is a liability nowadays."

The transportation secretary reminded that persons who formerly organized car-ride pools may cite this in support of petitions for additional gasoline coupons.
