been carried out. Where migratory camps are not available, the farmers furnish housing which has been approved by the Farm Security.

"The program will reach only a few critical areas this year, as funds are too limited and time is too short to do very much in the way of mass transportation of workers," Howard H. Gordon, of Raleigh, N. C., Farm Security Regional Director for Region IV, has pointed out.

In the five states of the region—North Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee—there was a recent transportation of 140 workers from the area of Danville, Virginia, and about the same number from the mountains of Eastern Kentucky to the apple and peach orchards and the tomato and onion fields of Western New York State. Under the plan, the labor was recruited by the Employment Service and transportation furnished by Farm Security.

Slightly earlier, five bus loads of workers were taken from the mountain counties of Perry and Jackson in Kentucky to the Bluegrass section of Shelby County to cut tobacco and spike it in the barns. In this case, the labor was recruited by the Employment Service, but transported by the Shelby County Farm Bureau in school buses.

Agricultural leaders of the section have reported in the public press that the mountain labor, unaccustomed to working in tobacco, made excellent workers where farmers of the Bluegrass farms undertook to teach them how to cut and spike the stalks.

"It is entirely possible," Mr. Gordon pointed out, "that workers so transported for temporary work may find opportunities for establishing themselves and their families permanently in such new areas. In this way, the double benefit would be accomplished of taking labor from sections where it definitely is not needed and providing it where it is in keen demand."

MEDICAL OFFICERS

Carlisle Barracks, Pa., October 30, 1942—Five hundred and sixty more officers of the Medical Department today qualified for field duty with medical troops when they were graduated in the 16th Officers' Class from the Medical Field Service School at Carlisle Barracks. They left immediately for their respective units.

First Lieut. R. O. Jones of Burnsville was one of the group.

All but a few of the officers are experienced physicians, dentists and veterinarians, but the training course here in medical field work taught them the military knowledge necessary for them to be efficient Medical Department Officers, capable of treating and caring for the wounded under actual combat conditions, as well as preventing disease through military sanitation and other preventive measures.

The graduation ceremony, which closed the one month training course, was held in the War Department Theatre where each officer received his diploma from Brigadier-General Addison D. Davis, Commandant of the School and Assistant Surgeon General of the Army. In his address to the graduates, General Davis cautioned the men of the importance and seriousness of the work that lay before them in the dual role they will have to play in this war as physicians and soldiers.

The rationing board chairman urged car owners with more than five tires for each vehicle to dispose of these excess tires at once, since the rationing board will demand an explanation from any car owner who lists more than five tires. Excess tires can be sold to the Government through the local office of the Railway Express Agency.

FARMERS ARE URGED TO SEED LEGUME CROPS

North Carolina farmers should take advantage of the additional time allowed for seeding winter legume crops and spreading lime and phosphate under the 1942 AAA program, according to E. Y. Floyd, state AAA executive assistant at State College.

The time limit for carrying out these soil-building practices, he said, has been extended through November 15 because of delays caused by recent heavy rainfall. Other phases of the 1942 program in North Carolina closed on October 31.

"Our recent unseasonable rains came at a time when many farmers had their legume seed and lime and phosphate ready for use, but had been delayed in using them by the necessity of harvesting crops already matured. Appeals from farmers and AAA leaders throughout the state resulted in an extension of fifteen days for carrying out these practices being granted by AAA officials at Washington," Floyd said. "This will make it possible for a large number of farmers to complete farming plans they mapped out several months ago and earn their maximum soil-building payments under the 1942 program."

Payments made by the AAA for seeding legume crops and spreading lime and phosphate are counted toward the maximum soil-building practice payments which may be earned by any individual farm cooperating in the Agricultural Conservation Program.

Floyd declared that seeding of winter legumes and spreading lime and phosphate are more important than ever before this year due to the shortage of nitrogen fertilizers and the need for more pastures in the Food for Freedom Program.

"Nitrogen will be harder to obtain next year than it was last spring, and we will have to provide as much as we can for our own use by storing it in the soil with legume crops," he said.

REGULATIONS

More and more as our country becomes more completely adjusted to war there will be regulations to affect our every day living. More articles of food will be rationed; more rules will be made for our trucks and our tires, for the sale and purchase of many commodities, for the use to which we may put many of the things we already own, how fast we may drive.

We must keep up with these regulations in order to adjust ourselves personally to the many changes that will affect us in increasing degrees. We must know how to conserve so that we may aid in every war effort.

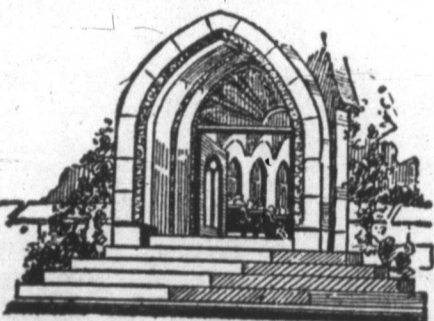

These rules and regulations are national, most of them. But of necessity there are local variations, such as dates for registering that will be best suited to the communities.

Local Boards must inform local communities of the national regulations and of the plans for carrying them out in the community. No other means for giving this information is so readily available or so well suited to the task as the local newspaper.

This is a service that local newspapers all over the country are glad to perform. It is one way they may help, in giving adequate and definite information, of making it easier for citizens to adjust themselves to war-time living and to aid their country by close cooperation in all plans.

Read your local newspapers, wherever you may reside, then try to make it easier to win this war by cooperation—in carrying out, in spirit as well as in the letter, the many regulations that it has become necessary for us to observe.
