ATTENTION TOBACCO GROWERS

Each farm operator will be responsible for reporting acreages of Burley tobacco grown under the 1944 tobacco marketing quota program, including the making of ground measurements where acreages are not available from previous records.

You will be mailed a form, Tobacco 818, to use in reporting this acreage—You may feel free to call upon Community Committeemen serving your community or employees of this office.

After all reports have been turned into the office we will pick out 5 per cent of them at random and spot-check.

The state office requires that we spot-check at least 5 per cent of the reports, and if yours happens to be the one spot-checked you will know that it is just a matter of form that has to be carried out.

PULPWOOD PLAYED VITAL ROLE IN ALLIED INVASION

Every man who cut pulpwood in 1943 and early this year can feel justly proud of the initial success of the invasion. For he had a part in making that first assault on Hitler's European Fortress possible.

Behind that landing on the western coast of France were months of preparation in which thousands upon thousands of tons of equipment and supplies were moved from this country to our base in England. The shipment of goods overseas prior to June 6 was the most gigantic movement of fighting equipment ever undertaken.

This machine age requires more than double the amount of material needed for each man in the last war. It requires, for example, 700,000 separate items, ranging from tanks to watch springs to equip a modern army, and many of these must be provided in millions.

Counting everything such as trucks, clothes, and weapons, it takes ten tons of organic equipment to get one man into the European theater of operations, and it takes sixty pounds of supplies to keep him there.

In this magnificent undertaking our men in England, pulpwood played a vital role. It not only provided the material for packaging and protecting many of the weapons and supplies; it was used in the manufacture of many of the items as well. For instance, U. S. invasion forces used 125,000,000 maps alone.

But the job has not been finished. The military need for pulpwood still exists and will continue until our boys march into Berlin and Tokio.

Pulpwood has gone to war. Let's keep it moving here.
