SPECIALIST SAYS MORE HONEY THIS YEAR

Raleigh.—The State honey crop this season is the best in several years, according to P. G. Craddock, apiarist with the N. C. Department of Agriculture. He said production of honey in the central counties is 'excellent', with that in the eastern area "far above average." No report was given on the mountain section, since bees in that locality must depend largely on sourwood, and it is not yet in full bloom. All colonies came through the winter and spring months in good condition, declared Craddock.

BURNSVILLE— "So They Say"

About town: Fine showers to help our corn and beans to grow... Richard Peterson home after two years overseas... New bride: The former Sidney Thompson who was married last week to Robert Brown, Presbyterian assistant pastor... The good news that Bob Cheadle is now in California after more than two years in the Pacific area. Will be home in two weeks... Junior Bradley has greatest luck to see "somebody from home"! He and Dale Banner met Sammy Wilson who recently reached Hawaii... Then Ernest Banner stopped by to see Dale Guss Peterson named United War Fund chairman for county... Mary Allison here from Detroit and Marjorie from Parris Island for visit... Lucille Chase now captain in N. C.

We're really proud of the county's response to the War Bond Drive! We're over both the E and F & G quotas (4th county in state to report over the E quota) and purchases are still being made... Several other names to add to those who deserve recognition for grand work during drive: Mrs. Terrill Young, Gracie Hunter, Mrs. Daisy Williams, Mrs. Monnie Johnson, Atlas McIntosh, Mrs. Arthur Robinson, Mrs. Kerl Banks... Remember that sales during all of July will count in the drive and your purchases now will be counted in...

Subject of most wide spread discussion and interest is the quarantine for infantile paralysis, passed by county health board Monday... There are no cases in the county now but this is the ounce of prevention that we trust will keep the county entirely free... The rules have been very widely distributed and are printed in this issue... The health department emphasizes the fact that these are not simply "Police rules" but are made for the protection of citizens of the county, especially the children... If one case is prevented that will be worth all the inconvenience it may cause... The one big rule is to keep away from crowds be careful of food and water supply and observe all health rules... If you are in doubt about any of the regulations, get in touch with the health department

GIVE ALFALFA ABOUT 30 POUNDS OF BORAX

A deficiency of boron is causing many North Carolina growers to lose their stands of alfalfa, reports Dr. Emerson Collins, in charge of Extension agronomy at State College.

On a recent trip over the state he noted many fields in all sections, from the Coastal Plain to the Mountains, where the leaves of the alfalfa crop were yellowing, showing a clear indication that the crop was suffering for boron. These plants develop branches that are much too close together and the leaves near the growing point are yellow, sometimes slightly reddened.

This is the best time of the year to determine the need of alfalfa for boron, and Collins suggests that growers examine their fields closely. Some growers often think that the trouble is due to dry weather.

He recommends that from 20 to 35 pounds of granulated borax per acre be applied and that it be distributed uniformly so as not to get too much in one place, which may cause damage to the crop.

A good method for getting uniform distribution is to mix the borax with sand, lime, or fertilizer and put it in with a fertilizer drill. A cyclone seeder can be used in putting out the straight material.

The borax can be applied at any time during the year but the sooner the boron deficiency is corrected the greater will be the yields and the more vigorous the plants. Stands can be maintained for a much longer period of time if the boron deficiency is corrected.

EXPERT SAYS PIGS BEING OVER-FED

Raleigh, N. C.—Farmers are feeding their growing pigs too much rich and fattening feed, reports Dr. William Moore, State veterinarian.

"I frequently see 50-and 60-pound pigs carrying as much fat in proportion as would market hogs of 250 pounds", declared Dr. Moore. He added that "when pigs are kept fat from six weeks of age until market time, they are apt to be easier victims of infection."
