THE WORLD'S BEST SAVINGS ACCOUNT

The world's best savings account grows in a farm woodlot. It has many advantages over the ordinary commercial kind. Here's why:

It can be started for just a few dollars invested in seedlings. . . . Sometimes the original investment is already there and waiting when a farmer buys a piece of land.

It grows larger every year with only the investment of a little time and labor during those months when farmers are least busy.

It pays an annual interest rate in excess of five percent.

It has a constant cash value. An initial investment in a farm woodlot together with the investment of a little off-season time and labor is all that is ever needed. A farm woodlot bank account grows forever.

Of course there are certain DON'TS too. . . . Don't clear-cut a farm woodlot and expect to get an increasing annual return along with increasing value of the woodland. After all, a person who draws the principal out of his commercial bank account can't expect as much interest out of the balance that remains. And if he draws it all out, nothing is left.

Don't carelessly allow forest fires to start. That is like making a sheaf of paper dollars and setting a match to it.

And don't cut carelessly either. Selective cutting and thinning of farm woodlots is like pruning out bad investments—only in a farm woodlot all the wood that is cut becomes pulpwood . . . and cash.

The don'ts aren't any different than those that any cautious banker would advise for a depositor. And the advantages in having a farm woodlot make it probably the safest and best bank account in the world.
